NOTICE.

Form 9, Section 17

Notice is hereby given that a Court will be held pursuant to the Ontario Voters' Lists Act by His Honor the Judge of the County Court of the County of Lennox and Addington, at the Town Hall, Bath, on TUESDAY, JULY THE 21st, 1914, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, to hear and determine complaints of errors and omissions in the Voters' List of the Municipality of Bath for 1914.

E. P. SHEPHERD,

Clerk of the Village of Bath
Dated at Bath, July 6th, 1914.

During the next six weeks I shall be travelling for The Watson Foster Co., Montreal, manufacturers of wallpaper.

I shall have special facilities in the various cities and towns visited to study the latest designs and treatment of the walls of homes, and shall also be in a position to secure the newest and most up-to-the-minute goods. During next season I expect to more fully than ever specialize in this line, and shall be able to offer suggestions to anyone

Town Council

Council Chambers,
Napanee, July 6th, 1914.

Council met in regular session on Monday evening, Mayor Alexander presiding.

Members present—Councillors Dickinson, Carson, Waller, Wiseman, Walters and Reeve Denison.

Minutes of last session were read and approved.

COMMUNICATIONS.

From Robert McKeown, Springfield, Mass., asking for information regarding a manufacturing concern to employ two or three hundred men. Also best rates over different railways, etc.

On motion the Clerk was authorized to write Mr. McKeown in reference to above communication.

From H. A. Boyce, Kingston General Hospital, saying their grant usually came along about this time of year, and if the Council could see their way clear to increase it, that it would be appreciated.

Moved by Coun. Waller, seconded by Coun. Wiseman, that the grant to Kingston General Hospital be $150.00. Carried.

From Canadian Municipal Journal offering twelve copies of their publication for $10.00, for use of Council.

On motion the communication was ordered filed.

From Elizabeth Blewett, asking that the carters' by-law be amended or repealed, so that they will occupy the western limit of market.

Moved by Coun. Waller, seconded by Coun. Walters, that the communication lay on the table till later in the evening. Carried.

From E. R. McCabe and others, asking that a cement walk be laid on the east side of Pearl street.

Moved by Coun. Waller, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the prayer of the petition be granted. Carried.

Mr. Baldwin, Engineer of Canadian Northern Railway, was present, with blue prints of where they hoped to move the present station within the course of a month. A new station would cost about $8,000 or $10,000, and he was of the opinion that the present one would only be a temporary affair, but was not prepared to say when, or how long before the new structure would be built. A new fast train service will be put into effect on Saturday, July 18th, between Ottawa, Smith's Falls and points west, and as the matter stands at present a delay of about fifteen minutes would be caused at Napanee by their passenger trains having to back in and out.

The Council would not adhere to having the present station located as a permanent one, and as Mr. Baldwin could not give them the desired information as to a new one, he said he would meet the Council in a body by special appointment, possibly on Monday evening next.

The Mayor informed Miss Blewett that the carters would be removed to some other part of the market from their present stand.

TO THE EDITOR.

Mr. Editor:—

I would like to enquire through your columns why the County Council has not seen fit to set out some flowers in front of the Court House?

Is it penuriousness, want of good taste or do they think they are practicing economy or are they afraid of over working the janitor in weeds and watering the beds? When they are planning their little joy rides for delegations of themselves and the friends to visit Toronto, Kingston, Belleville they do not seem to be moved by that same spirit of economy. They might sell the lawn mower and hose and raise a crop of potatoes for the goal in front of the Court House. Did it ever occur to these Council Legislators that other people, in fact the great mass of ratepayers, may have some sense of the beautiful even if there be none among their own ranks? A body that spends so much money recklessly, especially when it is being spent upon themselves, cannot afford to overlook what in all other Counties is the first consideration, the beautifying of the grounds about public buildings. It is hoped that the barn-yard policy has reached its limit and that the next body of men in charge of our county affairs will display a little more judgment in the treatment of these grounds.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Vanalstine, Napanee, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. E. F. Lake.

Miss Edna Jackson, Colebrook, has returned home after spending a few days with her aunt, Mrs. D. Kingsbury.

Mrs. A. E. Brunot, Oswego, N. Y., and three children are staying at Mrs. A. Breaugh's. Mrs. Brunot expects to remain here for three months.

Mr. Sylvester Moses, who lives on the Reserve, found a stone which he believes is a genuine diamond. Certainly the stone does not look like an ordinary one. Mr. Moses told the 'Post' man that he had been offered $1,100 for his find. It is not improbable that he may send it to an expert in Toronto for examination.

Mr. Henry Evans, Napanee, visited for a couple of days this week with his daughter, Mrs. W. H. Sagar. Miss Addie Evans, Mrs. Sagar's sister, also of Napanee, came up with her father.

The Rev. R. Burns and Miss Olive Burns had a delightful trip on the private yacht "Florence" owned by Mr. J. C. Eaton, Toronto. The cruise covered five days, and a number of ports on Lake Ontario were visited including Ogdensburg, N. Y., Prescott, Oswego, Port Dalhousie, Charlotte, and Toronto. The Deseronto party were the guests of Mrs. Eaton's mother Mrs. McCrea, and Reeve and Mrs. Mulligan, of Omamee, where Rev. Mr. Burns was stationed before coming to Deseronto.

about fifteen minutes were caused at Napanee by their passenger trains having to back in and out.

The Council would not adhere to having the present station located as a permanent one, and as Mr. Baldwin could not give them the desired information as to a new one, he said he would meet the Council in a body by special appointment, possibly on Monday evening next.

The Mayor informed Miss Blewett that the carters would be removed to some other part of the market from their present stand.

Coun. Carson, Chairman of the Finance Committee, presented the Treasurer's monthly statement up to July 6th, which was adopted.

Reeve Denison reported that a cement walk was being constructed from Thomas street on Newburgh Road south to Dundas Street, to connect with the permanent walk on Adelphi Street. Also that the walk on the south side of the road connecting with the steel bridge would be eliminated, and a crossing built to connect with the walk which runs parallel with Mrs. Deshane's property, on the East side.

On motion the report was adopted. A By-law relating to sewers and drains, received its necessary readings, was signed, sealed, numbered and finally passed.

A By-law to repeal By-law No. 890, for the construction of the diversion outfall sewer, received its necessary readings, was signed, sealed, numbered and finally passed.

Moved by Coun. Walters, seconded by Coun. Dickinson, that the Town Property Committee have power to act in placing the light on the corner of John and Thomas streets. Carried.

Moved by Reeve Denison, seconded by Coun. Walters, that the crossing and walk on Newburgh road be built. Carried.

John Smith was granted the right of way to his property, to be used in common with others.

Moved by Coun. Carson, seconded by Reeve Denison, that an order be drawn on the Treasurer in favor of U. M. Wilson for $30.00, for services in connection with the street leading to John Smith's house in the western part of the town. Carried.

Other business was transacted.

John Moore, of Brantford, and A. Conway, of Kingston, were home for a few days.

Portland Scriver and John Shorts are improving after severe attacks of rheumatism.

Mrs. Berkley, of St. Alban's, Vermont, is visiting Miss Lena Madden. Mrs. John Daly and children, of Toronto, are visiting with Mr. and Mrs. John Gehan.

Rev. C. W. Demille and family have gone to reside at Havelock.

Rev. Thompson and family are moving to Summerstown.

Miss Marjorie Brisco, of Galt, is visiting at her grandmother's.

J. Lochead, Mrs. Clancy, Mrs. Shorey, Mrs. Sagore, Charles Walker and Frederick Hill are having their houses painted.

YARKER.

Autos seem to be more plentiful than horses with rigs, and there are a number of prospective buyers turning up every week. It is certainly a very fine run for autos, starting from Napanee to Moscow, passing through the village on a nineteen-mile run of Strathcona, Newburgh, Camden East, Yarker, Colebrook and Moscow. There are in Yarker six autos and one motorcycle.

It has not yet been decided where the Sunday School will go for its annual excursion. The bone of contention lies between Sydenham or Lake Ontario Park, with the odds in favor of Lake Ontario Park, Kingston.

Crop reports indicate a good yield of grain but hay is rather light, though in some sections it is turning out better than expected.

David Gowdy is sinking a well on the Holiness Movement camp ground. The people have responded liberally in defraying the expenses.

The wheel works have been shut down for repairs and stock taking. They are in receipt of plenty of orders when they are ready to start.

Well what about the election in Adington. This banish the bar problem certainly put the party temperance conservatives in a very bad plight. However, they linked arms with the liquor party and snowed under a staunch temperance conservative in the person of Mr. Sanderson. There were a few conservatives here who put principle before party and will stay in the ranks of those who favor the abolition of the bar.

HINDU EXCLUSION VALID.

B. C. Court Upholds Action of the Immigration Officials.

VANCOUVER, July 7.—The immigration authorities won before the Court of Appeal on the Hunsli Singh test case, covering the Komagata Maru passengers.

The court yesterday unanimously upheld the validity of the Dominion order-in-council respecting the prohibition of the entry of an alien not direct from land of birth, not having $200 and being a laborer. The officials acted under these orders-in-council and can, therefore, proceed to deport all the rest of the Komagata Maru passengers who fall in the same category. It is not known yet if the Hindus will appeal.

The Komagata Maru gang will not permit the five marooned Hindus to get back on the vessel. The Japanese captain took up the Japanese consul on a rope ladder yesterday, and the consul gave an ultimatum to two o'clock. It is proposed to play a steam jet on the Hindus from a neighboring vessel if they resist efforts to place the five back on the boat.

YOUNG WOMAN KILL

Six Others Jump Before T
Strikes Motor Car.

Miss Waller, Daughter of Prince of Huron College, London, Is Victim of Peculiar Accident When Auto Slips Down Hill on to T
—Girl Too Terrified to Advice to Jump.

TORONTO, July 7. — One person was killed and six others escaped death by leaping to the ground, when a heavy motor car stalled on steep MacLennan avenue hill, north of the C.P.R. tracks, and bed directly in front of the eastbound afternoon C.P.R. freight bound Lindsay.

Miss Ella Waller, of London dead; her father, Principal Waller Huron College, London; Rev. Francis E. Powell and Mrs. Powell, of Toronto; Samuel Kennedy, chauffeur and two girls whose names have been ascertained, narrowly escaped being killed.

The car commenced to climb hill at a slow rate of speed, and stalled at a point about 25 yds away from the railway tracks. Police think the chauffeur may have lost his head, at any rate he did put on the brakes and the car gradually backwards down the hill with the heavy freight poun along at 20 miles an hour, and tling right down on the crossing. When the motor reached a point twelve from the tracks, all but Rev. Powell and Miss Waller had jumped. The pastor then called to the girls follow him and leaped to safety. Miss Waller, apparently too terrified to move, remained in the car and hurled with it twenty feet to fence on the west side of the railway. Rev. Mr. Powell extricated from the wreckage, and she was veyed to the General Hospital, where she died at seven o'clock.

Samuel Kennedy, the chauffeur was afterwards arrested by the police on a charge of criminal negligence. He was released last night on $5,000 bail.

Advice to Jump.

ONTARIO, July 7. — One person killed and six others escaped by leaping to the ground, when a motor car stalled on the MacLennan avenue hill, just off of the C.P.R. tracks, and backed up in front of the eastbound noon C.P.R. freight bound for Saskatoon.

Miss Ella Waller, of London, is the daughter of Principal Waller, of Huron College, London; Rev. Frank Powell and Mrs. Powell, of Toronto; Samuel Kennedy, chauffeur, two girls whose names have not yet been ascertained, narrowly escaped being killed.

The car commenced to climb the hill at a slow rate of speed, and was stopped at a point about 25 yards from the railway tracks. The driver thought the chauffeur may have fallen, and at any rate he did not stop on the brakes and the car slid backwards down the hill, the heavy freight pounding at 20 miles an hour, and bearing down on the crossing. When the motor reached a point twelve feet from the tracks, all but Rev. Mr.
Powell and Miss Waller had jumped.
The pastor then called to the girl to jump and leaped to safety, but Miss Waller, apparently too terrified to move, remained in the car and was crushed with it twenty feet to the west side of the road.

Rev. Mr. Powell extricated her from the wreckage, and she was con-vulsed to the General Hospital, where she died at seven o'clock.
Samuel Kennedy, the chauffeur, afterwards arrested by the police on a charge of criminal negligence. He was released late last night on $5,000 bail.

Auto Kills Child.

WATKINS, Ont., July 7.—Leila Watkins, aged six years, of Adeville, near here, was struck by an automobile yesterday afternoon and died a few hours later. The car was carrying a number of Children, and the girl was run-over across the road to her home at the time. Coroner Thompson of Watkins has opened an inquest.

OFFICER SHOT AT.

Is Out For Indians Who Attacked Police.

ONTARIO, July 7.—Three brothers of the Commanda Indians, have been arrested under instruction from Chief Police Rogers, of the Ontario force, Inspector Storey. The arrests followed a search for some days of the Brother Reserve, back of Sturgeon Lake. The Indians are charged with killing with intent to kill, with assaulting an officer, the discharge of weapons, and with taking game out of season.
About a month ago two game wardens were sent to inspect the Indian camp for abandoned skins, and some beaver skins were found. One of the brothers in a rage started to shoot from the camp and injured both game wardens, wounding one in the wrist. The brothers were issued and the arrest made yesterday.

CHAMBERLAIN BURIED

Thousands Line Route at Funeral in Birmingham.

In Spite of Request That Last Rites Should Be Quiet, Fellow Citizens of Statesman Pay Tribute to Memory — Simultaneous Services in London Are Attended By Notables in Official Life.

BIRMINGHAM, July 7. — Joseph Chamberlain, the Unionist leader, who for many years occupied a prominent position in British politics, was buried yesterday in Hockley Cemetery, which is situated in the constituency he represented in the House of Commons for so many years.

Previous to the burial a memorial service was held in the Church of the Messiah, which was attended by the Lord Mayor of Birmingham, the members of the City Council and other civic dignitaries.

Apart from the civic element the mourners at both the church and the cemetery consisted solely of members of the Chamberlain family, as the late statesman had expressed the desire that his funeral should be free from everything of a public nature.

Nothing could, however, prevent a great crowd of the citizens of Birmingham, among whom Joseph Chamberlain was a popular hero, from lining the route along which the funeral passed.

As the procession passed the men reverently uncovered.

Hockley cemetery was thrown open last evening, and for several hours a procession made up of many thousands passed in front of Hon. Joseph Chamberlain's grave, paying reverent tribute. The grave was covered with magnificent wreaths.

Services in London.

LONDON, July 7.—Simultaneously with the burial in Birmingham memorial services for the late Joseph Chamberlain were held in St. Margaret's Church, Westminster. Premier Asquith, the members of his Cabinet, many of the late Mr. Chamberlain's colleagues in the House of Commons, members of the House of Lords and of the foreign diplomatic corps, together with a large number of persons prominent in the official and social life of the capital, attended.

A service also was held in the Church of St. Lawrence, Jewry, which adjoins the Guildhall of the City of London, and in which parish the late statesman's ancestors lived for many years.

Son to Run For Vacant Seat.

LONDON, July 7. — J. Austen Chamberlain has decided to resign his seat in Parliament to-day in order to seek re-election in his late father's Birmingham constituency. Mr. Chamberlain now sits for the Bromsgrove division of Worcestershire.

Ulster.

LONDON, July 7. — How was it,
asked Lord Roberts in the House of Lords, during last night's debate, that they were faced with a situation in which the army had indicated the possibility of disobedience? The answer was that this was no mere political crisis; they were face to face with a clash of principles which raised a question far beyond the realm of ordinary politics at a com-

ONLY TEN "DIE HARDS"

Motion to Reject Home Rule
Amending Bill Fails.

Lord Willoughby de Broke's Supporters in House of Lords Are Snow-ed Under by Unionist Peers, Who Plan to Amend Measure in Committee — Crewe Urges Conference of Leaders.

LONDON, July 7.—The House of Lords yesterday passed by 273 to 10 the second reading of the bill to amend the Irish Home Rule bill.

That the House of Lords would pass the bill in order to amend it in committee, was a foregone conclusion, but there was surprise that only ten "die-hards" could be found to vote for Lord Willoughby de Broke's motion for its rejection.

The Marquis of Crewe, in winding up the debate for the Government, challenged the Opposition to guarantee that there would be no civil war in Ireland, even if the bill was amended totally excluding Ulster.
Concerning the possibility of a solution by conference, if dropping the amending bill and breaking down the Government's policy was to be a preliminary, it would be impossible for the Government to accept it, but, short of entailing such a sacrifice, the Government was most anxious to facilitate a conference, he said.

For himself, he did not hesitate to say that if John Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster Unionist leader;
William O'Brien and two or three other Irishmen, could get together it would be a better augury for some permanent arrangement than any other kind of a conference.

After division was taken, notice of several amendments was handed in Ulster.

LONDON, July 7. — How was it,
asked Lord Roberts in the House of Lords during last night's debate, that they were faced with a situation in which the army had indicated the possibility of disobedience? The answer was that this was no mere political crisis; they were face to face with a clash of principles which
raised a question far beyond the
realm of ordinary politics at a comparatively early stage in the struggle.
He warned the Government that any attempt to use military forces for the coercion of Ulster would break and ruin the army. His words fell on deaf ears. The country might plunge into civil war or might drift into it, but whichever course they took it remained civil war. They might make the position of the army yet more difficult by graduating the steps, so as to give each step a fair appearance of legality and reason, but those steps would none the less put them into the same abyss. Later it would become manifest that force was to be used for the sole purpose of coercing Ulster. When that moment was reached the disaster to the army which he foresaw would come about.

DOUGLAS ACQUITTED.

New Yorkers Accused of Wholesale Illicit Importations.

NEW YORK, July 7.—Herman J.
Dietz, of New York, a diamond merchant, and his son Charles, were indicted yesterday by a Federal grand jury here on 11 counts, as participants in an alleged conspiracy to smuggle diamonds into the United State. Diamonds valued at from $300,000 to $500,000 were smuggled from Canada in 1911 and 1912. Assistant U. S. District Attorney R. A.
Wood stated last night. Government customs and secret service agents have been at work on the case for a year.

The indictment charges the accused with smuggling stones worth upwards of $100,000 between Feb. 13, 1911, and April 1, 1912. Attempts of the accused to sell smuggled stones in this city are specified. Bench warrants will be issued for their aris understood that they are now in

THE "MACHINE" IN MANITOBA.

Provincial Government Employee Swears to the Preparation of Bogus Affidavits in Scheme to Plug the Voters' Lists—
The Rogers—Roblin Machine at

In desperate endeavor to save the Roblin Government from defeat in Manitoba, employees of the Province have been made active instruments in a plot to plug the voters' lists of Winnipeg through the preparation of hundreds of bogus naturalization papers. This assertion is no matter of guess work. It is based upon the sworn testimony of John J. Pickersgill an employee of the Manitoba Liquor License Department who, under oath before the Court of Revision in Winnipeg a few days ago, declared that as a commissioner empowered to administer oaths he had signed many fake naturalization affidavits which had been sworn to by any applicant appearing before him.

Mr. Pickersgill did more than testify to this. He swore that he had done the work at the direction of one of his superiors in the employ of the Roblin Ministry, that the naturalization fees in connection with each set of bogus papers had been obtained from the License Department and the Provincial Morality Officer, and that when the fake naturalization documents were ready he reported the fact to the Assistant Chief License Inspector or the Morality Officer. After that was done, the papers were distributed to the "night clubs" and some of the hotel men in Winnipeg for use in plugging the lists with bogus names so that personators and repeaters brought in from the United States might vote for Conservative candidates when the election takes place a few days hence.

action in professing to bar liquor from militia camps, joined with his colleagues of the Borden Cabinet in lining up with the liquor interests in the alliance. Wherever the Borden Government could exert any influence against the Ontario Liberals and on behalf of the Whitney Government and the Government's liquor allies, the influence was exerted. Premier Borden himself delayed his vacation trip long enough to permit him to vote for supporters of the alliance in Ottawa.

Against such an alliance with the power and money at its command, the Liberals failed to gain the victory. The Borden and Whitney Governments and the liquor interests were successful in their joint efforts. Whether or not Sir Robert Borden and the other Conservative leaders will profit in the long run from a victory won through such an alliance is another question.

LIBERALISM'S GAIN IN ONTARIO

Popular Majority of Conservatives Decreased in the Provincial Contest.

An outstanding fact in connection with the Provincial election in Ontario is that the popular majority of the Whitney Government was considerably reduced. In Toronto, for example, the number of votes cast for Liberal candidates was three times as great as the number polled by the Liberals in the Provincial contest of 1911. In many ridings throughout the Province, the Liberals were successful in reducing large Conservative majorities by hundreds while in some cases former Conservative majorities running well up into three figures were tuned in good sized majorities for the Liberals. Taking the votes cast in the Province as a whole and comparing the total with the number cast in the last Ontario fight, it is seen that the Liberals have gained greatly in voting strength throughout the Province. While the Conservatives remain in power their advantage in the Legislature has been decreased by a number of seats and more significant than that is the drop in the Conservative popular majority.

The indication is plain enough that the Liberal tide is growing stronger in Ontario and the Conservatives, though they have won the Provincial fight again, are losing ground. When it is remembered that less than three years ago the Conservatives virtually swept the Province both in the local and federal contests, last week's gain in Liberal representation in the Legislature and, more than that, the decrease in the popular majority of the Conservatives show a very satisfactory growth of Liberal feeling and voting strength in Ontario. And the growth

ILLUSION IN WEIGHT.

Blunders That Simply Prove a Person's Good Judgment.

Take a sofa pillow in one hand, balance it carefully until you think you have a right sense of its weight. Hold a large glass in the other hand and have some one pour water into it until you think it weighs about as much as the pillow. Then weigh the two and see how far out of the way you are.

Or take a cap in one hand and put in the other as many coins as you think may be needed to balance it. You will find your judgment far from correct.

Take two stone jars. Fill one with hot water and the other with cold and ask a friend to say which is the heavier of the two. The bottle with hot water will seem 25 per cent heavier.

Take three articles weighing the same. Put one on the ground, one on a table and one on a high shelf. Ask a friend to lift them and determine which of the three is the heaviest. He will pick the one on the shelf as the one which weighs the most every time.

The laws of illusion in weight are quite exact, and it is marvelous to see what a large proportion of people will make exactly the same mistake in exactly the same way. Thus the pillow seems lighter than it is because its appearance suggests lightness. Of two similar weights the one that is the larger in size will always seem the lighter. That is why the weight of the cap will be underestimated in the experiment just described.

Any change from normal temperature, either hot or cold, will appear to increase the temperature. A piece of ice the same weight as a glass of water will seem to weigh twice as much.

The extra exertion needed to sustain the weight of an object either above or below our natural reach seems to make it heavier, and for this reason the weight on the shelf will seem to have the advantage.

Does this show what poor judges we are? Not at all. It only proves our good judgment. It is like the sad case of the college student in a class on optics who could see through the illusions, so that matters which appeared crooked to the rest of the class, although they were really straight, appeared straight to him. Instead of complimenting him on his discernment, the professor promptly expelled the student from the class on the ground that he was drunk. And he was!—New York American.

TRAGIC LAUGHTER.

Vibration and Nitroglycerin Form a Perilous Combination.

An accident, said to be the most extraordinary on record, occurred at some oil fields in the Baku district of Russia, on the borders of the Caspian sea. One of the big "gusher" oil wells became choked, and, with a view of blowing it clear, a number of iron drums full of nitroglycerin were brought down by rail from Derbend and deposited overnight in a large shed which was used by the men as a sort of canteen.

The steward of this establishment, a Greek named Darios, opened one of the drums for some reason best known to himself and decanted a small quantity of the dangerous liquid into a long, thin glass used for mixing vodka. This he placed on a shelf behind the bar. Shortly afterward there entered a

NOSE AS INDEX.

Character May Be Told by Studying That Member.

It is an ancient belief that nose indicates ancestry. We speak about the aristocratic nose with high bridge and the plebeian nose of the toiler. Certainly, in many cases, race can be distinguished by the nose. The Hebrew nose hardly be confused with the type negro nose. The highly-arched nose is supposed to indicate tendency to rule, and the flattened nose servility.

There are several classes of nose if we are to take the word of physiognomists. The Roman nose indicates executive ability. Its owner is the aggressive person, the conqueror. Portraits show that ancient warriors had this type nose. The Romans were trained especially for deeds of valour. The modern owner of such a nose achieve success, be a leader, but not in a battle for blood, but in battle for supremacy and successful business or professional life. A woman with this nose may be a social leadership if she chooses rather than some other line achievement.

The Grecian nose indicates refinement, artistic tastes, and a love of the beautiful were very hotel men in Winnipeg for use in plugging the lists with bogus names so that patronators and repeaters brought in from the United States might vote for Conservative candidates when the election takes place a few days hence.

Nor was this all. During the sitting of the Revision Court it was shown by the sworn evidence of some of the men concerned that signatures to oaths of allegiance and oaths of residence purporting to have been taken by foreigners in Winnipeg were foreigners pure and simple. Forgery, as well as the preparation of bogus affidavits, were part of the game of the "machine workers" for the Rogers-Roblin group in Manitoba.

Brief as this comment is, it gives some slight idea of the methods which are being followed by the Rogers-Roblin machine. Fake affidavits, forgery and doubtless perjury have been used. Anything to save Manitoba for the Conservatives is the Rogers-Roblin motto. And Mr. Rogers is a member of the Government led by the Premier who used to talk so glibly and earnestly of the need for political purity.

A TRIPLE ALLIANCE VICTORY.

THE RECENT ELECTION IN ONTARIO WON BY AN ALLIANCE OF TWO CONSERVATIVE GOVERNMENTS WITH WEALTHY LIQUOR INTERESTS

The defeat of the Liberals in the recent Provincial election in Ontario was a victory for a triple alliance—the alliance of the Borden and Whitney Governments with the organized liquor traffic.

Self-interest had led the liquor-men to ally themselves with the Whitney Government against the Liberals and the Liberal policy of progressive legislation. Their money and all their influence was thrown into the scale on behalf of the Conservative candidates. As soon as the Dominion of Parliament was prorogued, Borden Ministers and Conservative Commoners and Senators from Ontario jumped into the fight side by side with the other parties to the alliance. The work of supervising the organization work on behalf of the allies was taken up by the Borden Minister of Railways, Hon. Frank Cochrane, though it had been announced that his absence from his departmental offices in Ottawa was due to continued ill health. Hon. J. D. Reid, Hon. W. T. White and Hon. A. E. Kemp rushed into the field to further the efforts of the allies. Hon. Sam Hughes, who makes much of his Liberal tide is growing stronger in Ontario and the Conservatives, though they have won the Provincial fight again, are losing ground. When it is remembered that less than three years ago the Conservatives virtually swept the Province both in the local and federal contests, last week's gain in Liberal representation in the Legislature and, more than that, the decrease in the popular majority of the Conservatives show a very satisfactory growth of Liberal feeling and voting strength in Ontario. And the growth in coming months is likely to be greater than that in the past couple of years, as the weakness and blundering partisanship of Sir Robert Borden and his associates and the unfortunate national conditions which have followed from their administration of Canadian affairs is more fully realized.

MORE BORDEN WASTE.

Government's Plan to give Defeated Conservative Candidate $2,000 of Public Money—Another "Deal" in the Premier's own Province.

The story of a site for a public building at Canning, Nova Scotia, is a simple little tale but it is not without interest to the people of the country. It is pleasant, too, no doubt, in the ears of Mr. N. W. Eaton, since it tells of a Borden Government plan to pay him $2,000 for something which the country could obtain for nothing.

When a site for a public building was sought in Canning, a suitable piece of ground was offered the Government for nothing by Sir Frederick Borden, who is a citizen of the town. But Mr. Eaton had another piece of property which he wished to sell, and Mr. Eaton was a staunch friend of the Premier and had carried the Conservative banner unsuccessfully in 1908. As a faithful Conservative Mr. Eaton had to be "looked after" by the Conservative Government which gives more attention to the desires of its friends than it does to the public interest. The result was that the Government decided to purchase the Eaton land for $2,000 though the other site was favored by many of the people of Canning, and would have cost the country nothing. The Government plans on giving Mr. Eaton the two thousand while the country is to foot the unnecessary bill.

It has been found, however, that another strip of land will have to be added to the Eaton property in order to obtain a site of sufficient size. For this smaller bit of ground the Government offered to pay $1,100—a sum which its owners refused to accept on the score that it was excessive and that they could not honorably take such a price for land worth far less than that. As a matter of fact, the Government's reason for offering two or three times what the land was worth lay, of course, in its desire to make it appear that Mr. Eaton's property was worth $2,000 though it has been stated that the real value of this lot is not more than $250. How much will finally be paid for the additional property remains to be seen, for the price is now to be determined by the Exchequer Court.

But no matter what the Exchequer Court may decide, the Government is taking good care of its friend, Mr. Eaton. The country is to pay $2,000 plus the amount named by the court for the second piece of ground, for a building site when a satisfactory site could have been obtained free of all cost to the people if the Premier and his colleagues had not been so eager to serve the interests of a party favorite. The amount involved is not very large, it is true, but the story is illuminating and damaging as supplying one more bit of evidence of the manner in which the public interest is subordinated to party ends under the Premier who talked so glibly of economy and high ideals in political action—when he was in Opposition.

drums full of nitroglycerin were brought down by rail from Derbent and deposited overnight in a large shed which was used by the men as a sort of canteen.

The steward of this establishment, a Greek named Darios, opened one of the drums for some reason best known to himself and decanted a small quantity of the dangerous liquid into a long, thin glass used for mixing vodka. This he placed on a shelf behind the bar. Shortly afterward there entered a workman named Borkovitch, who was famous for the boisterous hilarity of his manner and especially for his loud, resonant laughter.

The sight of nitroglycerin in a vodka tumbler so excited his risibility that he gave vent to a series of stentorian guffaws. This set the half filled glass "ringing," and the treacherous contents immediately exploded.

The concussion sufficed, in its turn, to explode the rest of the stuff in the drums, entirely demolishing the shed and killing five persons, all who were in it at the time. The barman escaped through having gone down into the cellar just previously, whence he distinctly heard the laughter, followed by the musical "ringing" of the thin tumbler and the two explosions.—Pearson's Weekly.

Expansion.

A very stout fellow once presented himself to Sir Francis Burdett and asked him if he had a situation to give him.

"I do not know you," said Sir Francis, looking at him.

"Why, have you forgotten me?" said the fellow. "I was formerly a page in your house."

"My dear boy," said the baronet, "you have become a volume!"—Pearson's Weekly.

The Word "Ogre."

Old fashioned etymologists used to say that the word "ogre" commemorated the sufferings of Europe during the ninth and tenth centuries at the hands of the ravaging "Oigours," or Huns. This derivation, however, is now abandoned. "Ogre," which reached the French language by way of Italian and Spanish, is really Orcus, the Latin hell, afterward the god of the underworld. In Romanesque folklore this god became a shaggy, black, man devouring monster, with a particular taste for lost babes in the wood.

Pretty Thin Gold.

The gold beaters of Berlin at the Paris Exposition showed gold leaves so thin that it would require 282,000 to produce the thickness of a single inch, yet each leaf is so perfect and free from holes as to be impenetrable by the strongest electric light. If these leaves were bound in book form it would take 15,000 to fill the space of ten common book shelves.

Bright Prospects.

Manager (hiring office boy)—Well, my lad, what do you say? Applicant—Before I take the job, sir, I'd like to know if there's any chance of promotion. Manager—Well, as to that, it depends on the boy. The last one we had here owned the whole place before he'd been with us two months.

usage. The Romans were famous especially for deeds of valour. T modern owner of such a nose w achieve success, be a leader, perhaps not in a battle for blood, but in battle for supremacy and success business or professional life. T woman with this nose may obtain social leadership if she chooses it rather than some other line of achievement.

The Grecian nose indicates refinement. In that ancient country refinement, artistic tastes, and great love of the beautiful were valued rather than valour in war. T owner of such a nose is art loving and is successful in pursuit of this only when they are agreeable to or her tastes.

In opposition to this type of nose we find the snub nose, which shows undevelopment, crudeness. It is the nose of the child rather than that of the developed man. When it is seen in adults we find the childlike miscompanioning it. The owner does not achieve great success, but is content to keep on in his humble way. From this class come the many workers who lay the foundation of the wealth of the world. Their work is necessary, but they cannot drive others. They go where they are driven. "Theirs not to reason why; theirs but to do and die."

Antiquity of Petroleum.

Though it is only within recent times that petroleum has become an article of commerce, there is abundant proof that it was used in arts forty centuries ago. The most used in constructing the walls Nineveh and Babylon had petroleum mixed with it for the purpose of curing greater cohesion and excluding dampness. Traces of the bituminous matter are very distinct in the wall and the existence of petroleum springs at Is, some 120 miles from old Babylon, indicates one source of the supply. In the ancient history several eastern countries allusion made in unmistakable terms to the existence of petroleum springs.

Boric Acid.

Boric acid in considerable quantities is generally recognized as original constituent in the waters of gases given off with volcanic emanations. In fact, the Tuscan fumaro in Italy have been an important commercial source of boric acid for long time, and in the past, possibly even to the present time, almost the boric acid brought into the European market has been derived from this source. There is an abundance of evidence of the presence of boric acid in volcanic emanations in many parts of the world. On the other hand boron is so rare a constituent of forming minerals that it forms an appreciably small percentage of earth's rock mass as a whole.

"Plea" in the Legal Sense.

In the legal sense the word "plea" is grossly misused. One reads the lawyer during a trial "deliver an eloquent plea to the jury." He did nothing of the sort. He delivered to the jury an argument or entreaty that may or may not have been eloquent. A plea is properly used only of the pleadings or arguments before a trial, not of "argument" at the trial. A plea invariably addressed to the court is an "argument" may be addressed either to the court or the jury. The same applies (still in the legal sense of the words) to the verbs "plead" and "to argue."

NOSE AS INDEX.

Character May Be Told by Study of That Member.

It is an ancient belief that the nose indicates ancestry. We speak out the aristocratic nose with its high bridge and the plebeian nose the teller. Certainly, in a great many cases, race can be distinguished by the nose. The Hebrew could hardly be confused with the typical gro nose. The highly-arched nose supposed to indicate tendency to pride, and the flattened nose shows rility.

There are several classes of noses, we are to take the word of physiologists. The Roman nose indicates executive ability. Its owner the aggressive person, the conqueror. Portraits show that the ancient warriors had this type of nose. The Romans were trained especially for deeds of valour. The modern owner of such a nose will hieve success, be a leader, perhaps in a battle for blood, but in a title for supremacy and success in business or professional life. The woman with this nose may obtain leadership if she chooses that rather than some other line of achievement.

The Grecian nose indicates refinement. In that ancient country refinement, artistic tastes, and great value of the beautiful were valued

HUERTA'S ARMY.

Extraordinary Style of Soldiering In Mexico.

An English war correspondent has some hard things to say about Huerta's army which has been recruited largely by seizing men and women off their streets. He declares that the officers do not take soldiering seriously and that the men, lazy and untrained, hate to fight as much as they hate to work.

The troops are accustomed to live in trains. Their wives are taken along, too, to act as army service corps. They would never be in any hurry to start. They enjoy the lazy side of soldiering.

Torreón, the town recently captured by Villa, was taken by the rebels once before, in September last. After denying for a week that it had fallen the war office admitted the truth, but said that it would be retaken in a few days. For a month or so nothing happened. Then it was announced that "a blow would be struck." Gen. Velasco would start at once and the rebels would be driven out of Torreón. The Government had been urged to act vigorously because in the cotton district a record crop was in need of being picked. They responded by putting a new tax upon cotton "to meet the cost of the war-like operations," and by doing—nothing!

BATH DANGERS.

Greater Danger From Electric Shock When Body Moist.

A man is in much greater danger from electric shock when taking a bath than under ordinary conditions, as the surface of the body when moist offers much less resistance to the current than when dry. Persons have been killed while bathing by current that would scarcely have affected them outside the bath. Says Cosmos (Paris):

"Balthazard has recently told at the Society of Legal Medicine of the case of a lady killed by electric shock in her bathroom at the moment when she was pressing the button of an electric bell between the poles of which there was a difference of potential of not more than 110 volts.

"In ordinary circumstances, owing to the great resistance of the human body, such a small electromotive force presents no great danger; but when the circuit contains, as in the case reported, a large surface of moist skin the resistance falls and more than 100 milliamperes may pass through the organism, sufficient at this tension to produce death by tetanization of the respiratory muscles.

"Currents of even 46 volts are dangerous in a bathroom. It should be remembered that currents of feeble intensity can produce a sudden rise of arterial tension capable of causing sudden death in a person with a weak heart.

"High tensions, enabling currents of 4 to 5 amperes to pass, have quite a different effect. They do not generally cause death, because the modifications of the tissue produced at the point of contact at once oppose a considerable resistance to the passage of the current. The intensity within the organism is not sufficient to cause tetanization of the respiratory muscles, and the lesions are usually purely local."

A Red Sea Pirate.

The old-fashioned pirate captain, with a brace of pistols tucked into his belt and a colored handkerchief tied around his head, who buried his treasure and made his captives walk the plank, must retire into the background nowadays before the pirate with modern ideas and an aptitude for commercial enterprise.

A pirate captain flourishes at the present time in the Red Sea who commands a large dhow. He captures other dhows carrying merchandise, stores the captured goods somewhere out of the reach of Turkish sailors or soldiers, and then enters into negotiations with the merchants to whom the goods were consigned, offering to sell them their own goods at a very reduced price.

This modern pirate has just made a fine haul, having captured a cargo worth 20,000 rupees, which was consigned to merchants at Aden.

He unloaded this, set the captured dhow free, and at once wrote to the merchants at Aden, notifying the sums for which the goods would be sent on to them.

There is a touch of humor in his management of this his latest capture, for he knew that the merchants dhow was carrying a large quantity of contraband tobacco, and that its captain would, therefore, be unable to lay a complaint before the Turkish Government.

They All Do.

An enthusiastic citizen, on the verge of a trip to Europe, was rejoicing over the fact and descending on the pleasures to come.

TWO NERVOUS WOMEN

Made Well By Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa. — "I had a severe case of nervous prostration, with palpitation of the heart, constipation, headaches, dizziness, noise in my ears, timid, nervous, restless feelings and sleeplessness.

"I read in the paper where a young woman had been cured of the same troubles by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound so I threw away the medicines the doctor left me and began taking the Compound. Before I had taken half a bottle I was able to sit up and in a short time I was able to do all my work. Your medicine has proved itself able to do all you say it will and I have recommended it in every household I have visited." — Mrs. MARY JOHNSTON, 210 Siegel Street, Philadelphia, Pa.

Another Bad Case.

Ephrata, Pa. — "About a year ago I was down with nervous prostration. I was pale and weak and would have hysterical spells, sick headaches and a bad pain under my shoulder-blade. I was under the care of different doctors but did not improve. I was so weak I could hardly stand long enough to do my dishes.

"Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has made me well and happy and I have begun to gain in weight and my face looks healthy now." — Mrs. J. W. HORNBERGER, R. No. 3, Ephrata, Pa.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

LEFT HIM IN IGNORANCE.

No Wonder the Shade of Sir Isaac Newton Was Disgusted.

Augustine Birrell, author and statesman, at a newspaper men's dinner told a unique ghost story.

"I have been haunted ever since I was almost a boy," he said, "by the constant repetition of one and the same dream. It comes to me again and again. It is this: I dream I am walking about somewhere in some plain or desert, and I suddenly encounter the agitated ghost of Sir Isaac Newton. He approaches me, his eyes almost starting out of his head; he tells me who he is and how ignorant he is of all that has happened in the world of science since he left.

"Now," he says, "I want you to tell me in a few words, for I have only a quarter of an hour left, all that has happened to the race—the progress. How is it? I know what it was when I left it. What is it now? My heart sinks, and, covered with confusion, I stumble, I stutter, I stammer. I become more and more involved, my ignorance becomes more and more apparent, and at last the unhappy ghost, throwing up his hands, leaves me with dismay.

"That dream constantly comes to me. The only difference is that the moment for deeds of valour. The owner of such a nose will achieve success, be a leader, perhaps in a battle for blood, but in a title for supremacy and success in business or professional life. The man with this nose may obtain leadership if she chooses that her than some other line of achievement.

In opposition to this type of nose find the snub nose, which shows development, crudeness. It is the nose of the child rather than that of the developed man. When it is seen adults we find the childlike mind accompanying it. The owner does not achieve great success, but is content to keep on in his humble way. From this class come the manual workers who lay the foundation of the wealth of the world. Their work is necessary, but they cannot direct it. They go where they are led. "Theirs not to reason why; theirs but to do and die."

Antiquity of Petroleum.

Though it is only within recent years that petroleum has become an article of commerce, there is abundant proof that it was used in the forty centuries ago. The mortar used in constructing the walls of Leveh and Babylon had petroleum mixed with it for the purpose of securing greater cohesion and excluding dampness. Traces of the bituminous matter are very distinct in the ruins, and the existence of petroleum springs at Is, some 120 miles from Babylon, indicates one source of supply. In the ancient history of the eastern countries allusion is made in unmistakable terms to the existence of petroleum springs.

Boric Acid.

Boric acid in considerable quantity is generally recognized as an original constituent in the waters and is given off with volcanic emanations. In fact, the Tuscan fumaroles have been an important commercial source of boric acid for a long time, and in the past, possibly up to the present time, almost all boric acid brought into the European market has been derived from this source. There is an abundant source of the presence of boric acid in volcanic emanations in many parts of the world. On the other hand, it is so rare a constituent of rock forming minerals that it forms an incredibly small percentage of the whole of the rock mass as a whole.

"Plea" in the Legal Sense.

In the legal sense the word "plea" is grossly misused. One reads that a lawyer during a trial "delivered eloquent plea to the jury." He delivered nothing of the sort. He delivered to the jury an argument or an oration that may or may not have been eloquent. A plea is properly only one of the pleadings or arguments before a trial, not of the argument at the trial. A plea is invariably addressed to the court; "argument" may be addressed to the court or the jury. The lawyer applies (still in the legal sense of the words) to the verbs "to plead" and "to argue."

the war office admitted the truth, but said that it would be retaken in a few days. For a month or so nothing happened. Then it was announced that "a blow would be struck." Gen. Velasco would start at once and the rebels would be driven out of Torreón. The Government had been urged to act vigorously because in the cotton district a record crop was in need of being picked. They responded by putting a new tax upon cotton "to meet the cost of the war-like operations," and by doing—nothing!

The forces which were to retake Torreón advanced and retreated, chassued and set to partners, marched this way and marched that. Gen. Velasco was frequently reported to be not with his command, but in Saltillo. Not until Dec. 10 was Torreón retaken, and then only because the rebels had drawn off and left the garrison very weak.

After the evacuation of Torreón by the Federals Gen. Munguia was tried by a court of inquiry. The intention was to shoot him. This was his defence: "How could I meet the rebels in the open?" he asked; "they fight in loose formation. I was obliged to keep my troops together. If I did not they would melt away. Desertion is the idea uppermost in almost every soldier's mind. Again, how could I order my officers to lead their men to the attack? I knew their men would shoot them down as soon as they got the chance."

Mexican generals have unfortunately very little talent for war, and they make, as a rule, no attempt to "lick their men into shape." Officers in command are incredibly slack. At a small battle in the State of Morelos the Federals by use of machine guns forced the rebels to retire. The nature of the country made it easy for their retreat to be cut off. But the Federal colonel looked at his watch. "It is time for dinner," he said, and told his bugler to sound the "Cease fire." The rebels leisurely went away.

That kind of incident, which happens daily, helps to keep current the belief that Federal officers do not wish to bring the war to an end. They do not take soldiering seriously.

The Mexican army has no army service corps, no medical department to speak of. It carries no camp equipment, no supplies. Watch a field force break camp at dawn. First there go pattering off a horde of women laden with pots and pans, blankets, sometimes babies. These are the soldaderas, the camp followers, the commissariat of the force. That they move as quickly as they do is a miracle. Whatever the day's march may be they are always on the camping ground before the men arrive. They rig up shelters, they cook tortillas and frijoles (maize cakes and beans), they make coffee. You see them mending their husbands' coats, washing their shirts, roughly tending flesh wounds. Without these soldaderas the army could not move. While President Huerta was seizing hundreds of men by night in Mexico City and other cities in order to swell his forces to a hundred thousand he also had women "pressed" to go with the new soldiers and take care of them. Criadas (maid servants) were positively afraid to be out after dark.

This extraordinary system accounts for the immobility of the Federal troops. Compared with the rebels they are leaden footed. They cling to the railways and to the box cars, in which they live with some comfort.

management of this his latest capture, for he knew that the merchants show was carrying a large quantity of contraband tobacco, and that its captain would, therefore, be unable to lay a complaint before the Turkish Government.

They All Do.

An enthusiastic citizen, on the verge of a trip to Europe, was rejoicing over the fact and descanting on the pleasures to come.

"How delightful it will be," said he to his wife, "to tread the bounding billow and inhale the invigorating oxygen of the sea! The sea! The boundless sea! I long to see it! To breathe in great draughts of life giving air. I shall want to stand every moment of the voyage on the prow of the steamer with my mouth open!"

"You probably will, dear," interrupted his wife encouragingly, "that's the way all ocean travelers do."

Outwitted the Women.

While the men of a village named Borhoff, in the Vitebsk Government, were holding a meeting, the doors of the room were suddenly flung open and the women of the village entered in a body, demanding that the men should there and then abolish the local vodka (spirit) shop, otherwise they would not let the proceedings continue.

Above the din was heard a voice: "They are right! Let those who are for the women's resolution come outside!" The women triumphantly trooped out—alone. The door was then suddenly locked, and the meeting proceeded.

One View of the Kiss.

The olfactory kiss is Mongolian. The nutritive affair is European. The Mongolian kiss is with the nose. The European kiss is with the mouth.

The Mongolian kiss indicates that the party sniffed would be an agreeable prey. The European variety indicates that the party embraced would make a delectable meal.

They are but the different forms of the same instinct of preservation—the give and take of wild beasts.

Compromise.

Doctor (laughing)—Some of those patients are the limit. The man who just left has several ailments, and for one I prescribe a cold plunge in the morning, while for another I told him to take a hot bath at night.

Wife—And what did he say?

Doctor—He asked if it wouldn't do if he went at noon and took a lukewarm bath.

His Reasoning.

De Tough—I want to return this dog to the gent what owns him. I seen his ad. in the paper.

The Lady—How did you guess it was a "gent" that put the ad. in?

De Tough—'Cause it said, "No questions asked."

Constipation

is an enemy within the camp. It will undermine the strongest constitution and ruin the most vigorous health. It leads to indigestion, biliousness, impure blood, bad complexion, sick headaches, and is one of the most frequent causes of appendicitis. To neglect it is slow suicide. FORCE OF VIBRATION.

A Musical Chord That Shattered a Huge Glass Bowl.

Discussing the proposition that a wineglass can be broken or shattered to pieces by a musical chord, Edgar Lillian Larkin in the New York American says:

"I had a huge glass bowl one foot in diameter resting on its glass stand. The flint glass was from one-quarter to three-quarters of an inch thick. I rosined a violin bow, drew it across the edge, and the entire hemisphere of solid glass disintegrated into hundreds of small pieces. The sound of breaking into fragments was entirely unknown to me, a crackling or grinding, and the bits of glass flew far apart."

"I had used this same bowl before classes for several years with violin bows. But on this particular day the students as well as I were surprised at the breaking and unearthly noise."

"The fact is I happened to vibrate the bowl with its key note—that is, set harmonic rate, which means the precise rate with which it was able to vibrate to send forth that note, for notes are rates of vibration, and they all obey rigid and beautiful harmonic mathematical laws, and these agree with other set and fixed laws."

The Great Leveler.

A well known New York millionaire and his wife went to a trottery one afternoon with the idea of doing a little incognito dancing. One of the professional partners approached.

"May I have the pleasure?" he said. The lady was gracious, and they whirled off into a lively onestep. When the number was over the rich man's wife complimented the professional on his dancing.

"Thank you, Mrs. Blank," he murmured, calling her by her real name. The husband pricked up his ears. "How the deuce did you know who we were?" he asked.

"Why, don't you remember me?" said the professional cavalier, straightening his beautifully tailored figure. "I was your chauffeur two years ago."—New York Post.

Europe In Africa.

The Africa of today is partitioned off among the following nations: Great Britain, France, Germany, Italy, Portugal, Belgium and Spain. Great Britain has the fairer portions, her South African possessions having a fine climate and being in every way perfectly adapted to the white race. The French and Italian possessions along the Mediterranean are also well enough as regards climate, but are lacking along agricultural and other lines. It is exceedingly doubtful if much of German, Belgium and Portuguese Africa will ever become the seats of white civilization.

"For God's Sake, Let Me Stay!"

He pleaded with all the intensity his weakened body and soul could master. His voice trembled. Tears lurked in his strained, anxious eyes. "I have traveled for two days on the train," he said. "I have been turned out of my boarding house. I have been turned out of a hotel in my own town. The local hospital refused me admission. Nobody wants me. For God's sake, doctor, let me stay."

This man had been a railway conductor. He had money to pay for his needs; so he applied to the Muskoka Cottage Sanatorium for treatment of the disease which held his life in its grip—consumption. But those sufferers without money and without friends, what of them? With their hopeless knowledge that people shun them, they believe it futile to seek relief. If their lives are to be spared they must be sought out and supplied with nourishment, medicine, and treatment. To do this costs money. Will you contribute a trifle to help in this effort to save lives? Please act quickly. Winter has brought keen suffering.

Contributions to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives will be gratefully acknowledged by W. J. Gage, Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina Avenue, or R. Dunbar, Secretary - Treasurer, 347 King Street West, Toronto.

NOTICE.

Fellow traveller to the Bar of God! Which road are you on—the one that leads to everlasting joy or everlasting torment?

Life is so short at the longest compared to eternity, why will you waste your precious time and talents seeking after the things of this world, which shall all pass away forgetful to provide for the benefits of the soul, which is to live forever?

When such a beautiful home is provided, the way so plainly pointed out to us and yet the throng is hurrying on to that endless hell! Dear reader which road are you on? There are only two roads! You are on your way to Heaven or hell.

"Choose this day whom you will serve." "For in an hour when you think not, the Son of man cometh." What an awful thing to meet God unprepared and to spend eternity with the damned! Mother, are you taking your sons and daughters by the hand and saying, "This is the way, walk ye in it." Is it the narrow way? The only way whereby we can be saved, and gain Heaven, or is it the broad road with all its fashions and pleasures and gayeties, which surely mean ruin to the soul?

What father seeing his children approaching a fire blind folded would not rush out to save them? Here is the great Fire of Eternity to which everyone is hastening if they have neglected salvation.

Think of the agony of your children throughout eternity in that Lake of Fire that burns forever!

Rescue them. Oh! hasten to warn them of their danger, and remember your great responsibility before God, as father and mother. Time is flying and death is fast approaching everyone. Are you ready dear reader? Have you repented and turned from your sin, seeking the unsearchable riches of Christ? If so you are a wise. Young man, young woman, whom are serving? Satan is a poor pay-master. He gives you no beautiful home after death, naught but eternal suffering, where the fire is not quenched and the worm dieth not! Oh! awaken reader and prepare to meet God, to whom you owe your life-service!

The best in hair goods. Combing made into switches and etc. All goods guaranteed right at Hooper's—Napanee's Largest Drug Store.

Cornwallis and His Sword After Fall of Yorktown.

Art is not always true to history. Schoolboys of several generations familiar with the picture of Cornwallis surrendering his sword to Washington after the fall of Yorktown. Lord Cornwallis is revealed in the act of passing over his beautiful sword to the hands of his conqueror. The inference is that Washington took the sword and it as a trophy of victory. The facts quite otherwise.

Cornwallis, proud even in defeat, declined to put in a personal appearance on the occasion of his surrender. Allied forces, American and French, who had besieged him for three days, were drawn up in two columns along the road leading to Hamptons, on a fine bay horse, at the head of the French column, his white charger sat Washington, the head of the American troops, surrendered British and Hess marched out of their trench and passed down between the two armies.

Many thousands of Virginia citizens were gathered to watch the scene eager to get a glimpse of Lord Cornwallis. But they were disappointed that Cornwallis pleaded indisposition and stayed in his quarters. He held his sword by one of his officers, General O'Hara, to be delivered up to Washington. General O'Hara offered the sword to Washington, who directed him to General Lincoln, the one of whom Washington had appointed to conduct the surrender. Lincoln took the sword from O'Hara's hand and then politely handed it back, to be turned to Cornwallis.

TREES FULL OF FAT.

Some of Them Yield a Pretty Fair Substitute For Butter.

There are several trees that yield an oily substance much resembling butter and making a good substitute for it. Some of these grow in Europe, but the best known species are natives of India and South America.

The Passia butyracea, or the "butter tree," as it is commonly called, grows wild on the west coast of Africa. The butter obtained from this tree is derived by pounding and pressing seeds, which are three inches in diameter. When extracted the oil assumes consistency of butter and smells of chocolate. Not only is it an excellent article of food, but it is used extensively for the making of soap and candles.

The seeds of the crab tree of Brazil and Guiana are 70 per cent fat, the "crab wood tallow" derived from them is excellent for the manufacture of candles and soap. When boiled tallow turns out yellow butter which contains a small quantity of strychnine. The latter, however, is easily moved by prolonged boiling.

From the nutmeg a useful fat is obtained. The nutmegs which have been broken or damaged by insects, roasted, ground and pressed for fat, which is used for cosmetic medicinal purposes.

A tree abounding in the forest of Africa and called by Kaffirs "chigir" yields (from the fruit or bark, the source being unknown) a white but like substance which constitutes an important article of commerce on that continent.—New York World.

Shakespeare's Descendants.

Besides his first child, Susanna, Shakespeare's only other children were a boy and a girl, twins, born in 1585. Susanna married a Dr. Hall, a Stratford physician, in 1607, was left a widow in 1635 and died in 1640. She had only one child, a daughter, who, though twice married, left no children. Of the twins, the boy, named Hamnet, died at the age of eleven, and the girl, Judith, married Thomas Quincy and had three sons, who all died childless.

This is a Fact.

"When a man loves a girl in a novel he raves about her through forty chapters. 'In real life he never mentions her name."

"What's the application?"

MONEY VALUE OF SMOKE.

Over Half the Heat Energy of Coal Goes Up the Chimney.

To the engineer the smoke rolling and billowing out of the power house chimney is just like so many dollars taking wings from the company's strong box. The smoke escaping from a steam plant is composed of nearly 60 per cent of the heat energy of the coal which is being burned.

This energy is lost in the tiny particles of coal and carbon which escape up the chimney in the various gases which are freed before they are burned in the heated air and in various other ways. So, for every $10 spent for coal $6.50 is lost up the chimney.

Assuming that the energy of coal is 100 per cent, only 2 per cent of this is available in the form of light when you snap on the electric lamps. Nearly 99 per cent of the original coal energy is lost in transmitting this energy into heat, from heat to steam, from steam to electricity and in transmitting the electricity to your home.

The efficiency of the electric lamp is only 5 per cent—in other words, the lamp turns into light 5 per cent of the energy it receives and wastes 95 per cent of it in useless heat.—New York World.

Poetry and Poverty.

Writing of Poets' Corner, W. J. Lofie, in "Westminster Abbey," comments on the frequent and pathetic alliance between poetry and poverty. The first of the poets laid here, Chaucer—who dwelt in a house in the monastery garden known as "The Rose"—"fell into poverty in his old age." Spenser, according to Drummond of Hawthornden, "died for lack of bread" in King's street, Westminster. Ben Jonson "died in great poverty" in a house on the north side of the abbey, near St. Margaret's. Dryden is another immortal to whom the same fate attaches; also Butler of "Hudibras" fame. Chaucer's house was demolished to make way for Henry VII's chapel. His gray marble tomb dates only from 1555. Though so late in erection, it is good to recall that the tomb was the gift of a brother poet in happier material circumstances, Nicholas Brigham.

Wallis and His Sword After the Fall of Yorktown.

It is not always true to history. The story of several generations ago is told with the picture of Cornwallis entering his sword to Washington at the fall of Yorktown. Lord Cornwallis is revealed in the act of passing his beautiful sword to the hand of the conqueror. The inference is that the king took the sword and kept it as a trophy of victory. The facts are otherwise.

Cornwallis, proud even in defeat, decided to put in a personal appearance at the occasion of his surrender. The British forces, American and French, had besieged him for thirteen days. He was drawn up in two columns on the road leading to Hampton. On the left, on a fine bay horse, was the head of the French column. On the right, a white charger sat Washington at the head of the American troops. The British and French soldiers, dressed in their respective uniforms, passed down between the two columns.

Thousands of Virginia citizens gathered to watch the scene, all to get a glimpse of Lord Cornwallis. But they were disappointed in Cornwallis. He pleaded indisposition and stayed in his quarters. He sent word by one of his officers, General O'Hara, to be delivered up to the British. General O'Hara offered word to Washington, who directed to General Lincoln, the officer in Washington had appointed to accept the surrender. Lincoln took the sword from O'Hara's hand and politely handed it back, to be returned to Cornwallis.

TREES FULL OF FAT.

Of Them Yield a Pretty Fair Substitute For Butter.

There are several trees that yield an substance much resembling butter making a good substitute for it. These grow in Europe, but the known species are natives of Africa and South America.

Bassia butyacea, or the "shear tree," as it is commonly called, is wild on the west coast of Africa. The butter obtained from this tree is made by pounding and pressing the seeds, which are three inches long. The extracted oil assumes the consistency of butter and smells like late. Not only is it an excellent food, but it is used extensively in the making of soap and candles. The seeds of the crab tree of Brazil contain 70 per cent fat, and are called "cacao" derived from the word "cacao" which is excellent for the manufacture of soap. When boiled the seeds turn yellow butter which is a small quantity of strychnine. The latter, however, is easily removed by prolonged boiling.

The nutmeg is a useful fat is obtained from the nutmegs which have been dried and ground and pressed for the oil which is used for cosmetic and medicinal purposes.

The tree called by the Kaffirs "chignite" (from the fruit or bark, the exact substance being unknown) a white butter-like substance which constitutes an important article of commerce on that continent.—New York World.

Labouchere's Complaint.

DESERVED THE LEGACY.

The Gift Left by the Old Turk Was Properly Bestowed.

A Turkish story runs that, dying, a pious man bequeathed a fortune to his son, charging him to give $100 to the meanest man he could find and $100 to the most foolish.

The most foolish man is another story. As to the meanest, accounts agreed that a certain cadi filled the bill. Accordingly the dutiful son offered him $100.

"But I can't take your $100," said the cadi. "I never knew your father. There was no reason why he should leave me the money."

"It's yours all right," persisted the mourning youth.

"I might take it in a fictitious transaction," said the cadi, relenting. "Suppose—I'll tell you what I'll do. I'll sell you all that snow in the courtyard for $100."

The young man agreed, willing to be quit of his trust on any terms. Next day he was arrested, taken before the cadi and ordered to remove his snow at once. As this was a command the young man was utterly unable to execute, he was fined $20 by the cadi for contumacy.

"At least," the young man said ruefully as he left the court, "father's $100 went to the right man."—New York World.

RUSSIA A DANCING NATION.

And Red Is the All Pervading Color of the Real Native.

"Red is the obsessing color of the real Russian. His word for beautiful is 'preskrasnee,'" says a writer, which means literally 'very red.' A peasant girl in gala dress is red from the scarf on her head to her bright red boots, often relieved only by the white blouse, on which again is red embroidery. The snow white steps of state in the Kremlin are called the 'red stairs' as a tribute to their beauty and with no suggestion of their color.

"Russia is not barbaric. It is simple and childlike, whence its enormous charm. And it is a dancing nation; the dances are national, unique and quite unoriental. Peasants may be seen in their log built villages dancing away until they almost drop from fatigue. The Russian dance is full of vitality, spontaneous and strenuous; the eastern dance is restrained, suggestive and sometimes sinuous.

"Russian literature is supposed to be consistently gloomy. Of course there is a tendency to depression, but it would be equally correct to assume that German literature consists only of classical annotations and scientific treatises."—Chicago News.

Insulated Wires.

To keep electricity in the wires, to prevent it from escaping, which it is always trying to do, the wires have to be bandaged up in some substance through which the electricity cannot penetrate. This is called insulation. A wire is said to be insulated when it is wrapped in nonconducting covers. Dry hair is the best material; next rank glass, mica, porcelain, rubber, lava, oils, silk, cotton, etc. The wires used about ordinary buildings are insulated with rubber, oils, varnish and dry cloth. Some of the smaller wires, for electric bells, etc., are merely covered with closely woven silk or cotton.

REPENTANCE FIRST THEN CONSECRATION

Only the New Creature in Christ Can Understand God's Plan.

The Gospel Is For the Broken-Hearted — "The Meek Will He Teach In the Way" — Turning From Sin—Turning to God—The Brotherhood of Christ—Suffering With Christ.

PASTOR RUSSELL

June 28.—Pastor Russell's discourse to-day set forth the philosophy of the untold sufferings of true Christians throughout the Gospel Dispensation. Part IV. of The Photo-Drama of Creation, on exhibition at home and abroad, depicts the unwritten history of the Church of Christ and shows the cost of "following His steps." The Pastor's text was "Jehovah hath appointed Me to preach good tidings to the meek, to bind up the broken-hearted."—Isaiah 61:1.

The Gospel Message, the Pastor declared, is for the meek, for the broken-hearted—the only class which God wishes to have now. He is seeking those who desire to be Christ's joint-heirs in the Messianic Kingdom. Therefore the Message is unsuited to the hard-hearted. Only the tender-hearted care to know about God's love and mercy, the forgiveness of sins, the privilege of returning to the Father's House and of having Jesus as their Saviour.

The Pastor believes that it is a mistake to go out into the highways and byways to convert the very wicked—blasphemers, etc.—thinking that these are the ones for whom the Gospel is intended. The Scriptures do not authorize any such idea. Those living in sin unrepentant are not in proper condition to receive God's great Plan of the Ages, the speaker declared. God has said that "none of the wicked shall understand." He does not wish them to do so. God's Message speaks peace to those who are in trouble and who are seeking the righteousness which He provides.

The Gospel is not a hammer with which to break men's hearts, the Pastor said. He knows of no Scriptural commission for God's people to break hearts. On the contrary, he thinks that the Devil does most of such work.

The Two Conversions.

Next it was demonstrated that there are two conversions; one a turning away from sin, and the other a turning to God. The latter is the principal conversion. Only those who take the step of full consecration to God receive the Holy Spirit and obtain a clear view of the Divine Plan. Scripturally these are called children of God.

The Pastor showed that those begotten of the Holy Spirit not only belong to the Church, the Brotherhood of Christ on the spiritual plane, but are also reckoned as members of the Body of Christ on the earthly plane. From this viewpoint, he claimed, Christ has suffered in the flesh throughout this Gospel Age. St. Peter declares that the Prophets foretold the sufferings of the Christ.

Did Her Work at Night. Mrs. Catherine Gore, who wrote seventy novels between 1824 and 1861, worked on a strange plan. When J. R. Planche visited Paris in 1837 he found Mrs. Gore living in the Place Vendome writing novels, plays, articles for magazines—almost every description of literature flowing from her indefatigable pen. He says: "How do you manage it? I asked her. 'I receive, as you know, a few friends at dinner every evening. They leave me at 10 or 11, when I retire to my room and write till 7 or 8 in the morning. Then I go to bed till noon, when I breakfast, after which I drive out and pay visits, returning at 4 to dress for dinner. As soon as my friends have departed I go to work all night again.'"

Fate of Marshal Ney. It has been maintained by many that the famous Marshal Ney, whom Napoleon called the "bravest of the brave," was not executed, as history makes him out to have been, but succeeded, by the help of friends, in making his escape to America, where he lived to an advanced age, dying in peace in his own bed. The theory as advocated by many is that Ney went to North Carolina, became a school teacher and made many friends, to the more intimate of whom he confided his secret. But there is not much to the story except its novelty.—New York American.

of God. The Pastor showed that those begotten of the Holy Spirit not only belong to the Church, the Brotherhood of Christ on the spiritual plane, but are also reckoned as members of the Body of Christ on the earthly plane. From this viewpoint, he claimed, Christ has suffered in the flesh throughout this Gospel Age. St. Peter declares that the Prophets foretold the sufferings of the Christ and the glory to follow. St. Paul speaks of filling up that which is behind of the afflictions of Christ. After these sufferings are completed, the glory will follow.

Trials and discipline develop Christian character, preparing the child of God for future service in the Kingdom. Whoever suffers in the flesh because of being Christ's disciple has occasion for rejoicing. Such should continue faithful, that by and by as a polished jewel he may be ready for a glorious setting in the promised immortality.

Confessing or Denying Christ. The terms of membership in the glorified Body of Christ were next discussed. After one has been spirit-begotten, his name is written in the Lamb's Book of Life as a member of the Body of Christ. Our Lord has promised that if these are faithful to their agreement to sacrifice their little all He will not blot out their names from that Book. But if any such deny Him, He will deny them.

To confess Christ is to live for Him day by day—confessing Him in the use of time, influence, money, talents—in every word and act. Should any consecrated child of God deny Christ by neglecting his Covenant of Sacrifice, such would demonstrate his unworthiness of membership in the glorified Church.

Importance of Consecration. Great stress is laid upon consecration, the Pastor declared, because it is the only way of coming into relationship with God and of approaching the Heavenly Throne with assurance that our petitions will be granted. He illustrated his point by reference to the ancient custom for a host to furnish plain white robes for his guests to wear over their own garments when present at a wedding. All consecrated Christians have accepted God's invitation to the Marriage of the Lamb. Each must wear the Robe of Christ's Righteousness or else forego the feast.

The only way to get rid of sins is through belief in the Lord Jesus Christ and full consecration to do God's will—even unto death. "If any man will be My disciple, let him deny himself, take up his cross and follow Me."

A Discovery.

A merchant in a Canadian city once made a discovery. He had purchased some goods that did not turn out as he thought they would. Instead of advertising "Enormous Bargains" he simply said, "I bought them to sell at $10.00, but they are not worth it; in fact I cannot recommend them at all, but you will find them worth $4.00." He sold them all and made some new customers, who were convinced of his sincerity.

Nothing new about it. Truth is as old as the hills and he simply told the truth. He discovered that honesty is the best policy, and fortunately very many advertisers are making the same discovery.

A CONSTANT MENACE.

The Game of Chance Played by the Ocean Liners.

The presence of ice is a constant menace to the navigator. Its movements, often fairly rapid when propelled by wind and current, make its position always uncertain. One ship may see immense fields of ice which another, passing over the same route a few days later, may never encounter. Only those who have stood on the bridge of an Atlantic liner with her officers on a dark night when in the region where ice may appear can appreciate the anxiety of those tireless men, who know that collision with even a small floating ice mass means damage to the ship. The small masses called "growlers" often mean great danger. They float low in the water, leaving little above to be seen by the lookout.

Arctic ice is of great solidity and very irregular in shape. Frequently it presents sharp edges which can cut the plates of a ship, shear off rivets or drive a hole through the bottom as readily as a steel knife. The game of chance is therefore played by every ship that speeds through the ice area at night or in a fog.

To those skippers who have had many years of experience in navigating its presence is made known by a number of effects. Before ice can be actually seen there is a peculiar whiteness observed around the berg on a dark night, except in the case of dark bergs. Mariners call this the ice "blink." It is caused by the reflection of the scattered rays of light from the sky by the white surface of the berg. Thus it is a contrast between the black surface of the water, which reflects none of the light, and the ice, which scatters nearly all of it. A dark berg is one casting a shadow toward the ship. When the light comes more strongly from any particular part of the sky the iceberg often cannot be seen in certain directions, while clearly visible by the ice blink in others. This is said to be the reason why the officers of the ill-fated Titanic did not see the berg soon enough to stop.

As ice is approached, too, the temperature of the air usually falls and the mariners describe a peculiar damp cold, as distinguished by the cold caused by a change of wind. Icebergs are sometimes detected, also, by the echo from the steam whistles or fog horn. Then they are frequently heard for many miles by the noise they make in breaking up or falling to pieces. The cracking of the ice or the falling of huge chunks into the sea cause a noise like distant thunder.

Yet despite all these ways of discovery, the presence of ice during certain seasons is a constant menace to those who cross the sea, as the wreck of many a good ship goes to prove.

Broke It Gently.

A miner got killed and a tactful associate was delegated to break the news to the widow. So the tactful fellow called at her house and said:

"With your golden hair, blue eyes and pink and white complexion, ma'am, you'd break every heart in town if you were widow's weeds."

The young woman laughed and blushed for pleasure.

"Oh, go on," she said.
"And you are a widow, too," said the tactful miner quickly, seizing his chance. "Bill's head and legs and arms was just blown off in an explosion. But you're goin' to look good in black, though!"

A ROYAL ANTIQUARIAN

QUEEN HELENA OF ITALY
ENTHUSIASTIC EXCAVATOR

Some Years Ago While the King Was Away Hunting She Amused Herself Recovering Ancient Remains and Has Undertaken Systematic Exploration of Settlement of Earliest Latin Peoples.

About eight years ago the Queen of Italy, while her husband hunted the wild boars along the low, sandy coast, still almost entirely covered with wood, as it was in ancient times in the royal preserves of Castle I ziano, while the time away by excavating the remains of a Roman villa and made a wonderful discovery. The Queen found a statue which archaeologists identified as a fine replica of the famous discobolus, discus thrower of Myron. The statue, which was broken, was pieced together very carefully, or, rather reconstructed, and it is now in the National Museum of Rome.

Encouraged by the success of first attempt at excavating, the Queen became so greatly interested in archaeology that she decided to undertake a systematic exploration of one of the most important sights in Rome—namely, where the first inhabitants of Italy settled considerably more than 1,000 years before the birth of Christ.

The Latins appear to have been originally a Pelasgian tribe, who, period long anterior to the foundation of Rome, descended into the low plain of the Tiber, expelled the original inhabitants settled in the district known as Latium. The Latins formed a confederation or league consisting of the states. Although Rome was a Latin colony she became powerful even in the reign of King Tullius Hostilius to make war against the Latin town. After a war which lasted until B. C. the Romans finally defeated the Latins, dissolved their league and made them subjects of Rome.

The sites of most of the Latin towns were gradually lost, the territory where they stood became a desert, and malaria drove away the inhabitants. A forest of bay trees (laurel), from which the primitive Latin city Laurentum probably derived its name, still existed under the empire and gave the place a name for salubrity. Many emperors had villas in the neighborhood, the extensive ruins of which are now mainly sand hills in the belt of the shore which stretches for a distance of over thirty miles from the mouth of the Tiber to the promontory of Ostia, the modern Anzio.

This vast area the Queen now intends to explore in a scientific manner in order to discover traces of early Latin civilization, study the origin of the inhabitants and perhaps find monumental evidence of the rival of Aeneas in Italy and his connection with the King Latinus. Self-imposed task of the Queen of Italy is of vast magnitude.

The Queen's work has up to present been kept secret, and a few well known professors of archaeology, like Lanciani, Pigorini, the late Prof. Vaglieri, director of excavations at Ostia, were invited to see the excavations.

Besides the villa where she found the statue in 1906 the Queen has uncovered remains of another villa which is supposed to have belonged to Pliny. The remains of this villa are supposed to be the sub-

DINED ON JACKALS.

But There Was Other Food the Arabs Simply Would Not Eat.

Describing the Mohammedans of Algeria in his book, "The Barbary Coast," Albert Edwards says he discovered that with the exception of the obvious difference in clothing they seemed to be very much like other men, although "they do not care for the same things—at least not for the same reasons." Of this he had a striking example during his first winter in Algeria:

"I had asked my host about the jackals which howled the night through in the brousse about his home. I was curious to know how much they resembled the coyotes of our western plains. A few days later he called me from my desk with the news that some of his Arab workmen had trapped a jackal. I followed him out into the patio and found a half dozen natives squatted about an earthen pot. Two of them were holding the animal while another skinned it. A jackal looks like nothing but a very sick and mangy dog. I can not imagine anything less appetizing. I was surprised and rather nauseated to see that the men were preparing the beast for cooking.

"Do the natives eat these things? I disgustedly asked my host in French.

"The man who seemed to be the chief cook understood the language of the conquerors. He looked up surlily.

"Yes," he growled, 'but we don't eat plg.'

"I thought of our slaughter house scandals and the doubtful cleanliness of our food supply and felt very much like the owner of a glass house who had thoughtlessly begun to throw stones."

Bostonians in Good Standing.

"Yes, I had a brother in Boston once," said a Chicago lady to a Bostonian. "He was in some great musical society there, but I forget its name."

"Handel and Haydn society, perhaps," suggested her visitor.

"Well, I guess so. Handel and Haydn were Boston men, weren't they?"—Christian Register.

Ancient Posters.

It is probably the general impression that posters and handbills are modern inventions, but it has been discovered that the ancient Romans practiced this method of advertising. In digging at Herculaneum there was brought to light a pillar covered with bills, one on top of another. The paste used to stick them was made of gum arabic. The bills, when separated and examined, were found to be programs and announcements of public meetings and even election proclamations.

The Gift of the Sex.

Jones was telling what an excellent cook his wife was. Smith boasted that his wife was a splendid dressmaker, and Robinson proudly stated that his wife was an unusually clever artist.

Brown was not to be outdone, so he remarked:

"My wife is a great linguist."

No one seemed impressed. There was a moment's silence; then Robinson spoke up.

"Humph!" he exclaimed. "They all are!"

Domitian Swatted Flies.

The original "swat the fly" man was Domitian, Roman emperor from 81 to 96 A. D. History records little good of Domitian, but it does say that he anticipated the anti-fly movement by more than 1,800 years. Maltreating the buzzing pests was his favorite amusement, it is recorded, but he was not animated by a desire to save babies' lives or avert epidemics.

One biographer says of the old Roman that "one of his favorite pastimes was hunting and killing flies," and Suetonius, the famous historian, wrote thus of Domitian: "In the beginning of his reign he used to spend daily an hour by himself in private, during which time he did nothing else but catch flies and stick them through the body with a sharp pin."—New York Tribune.

Rail Splitting.

Finished splitting the winter's rails—about sixty. Have never been able to determine whether they split best from top or butt. Sometimes one succeeds, sometimes the other. Besides the villa where she found the statue in 1906 the Queen covered remains of another which is supposed to have belonged to Pliny. The remains of this consist mainly in the substructure but the discovery is important; it enabled the Queen to locate the site of a village, known as Augustanus Laurentium, which ably took its name from August himself and which, according to Pliny, was near his villa.

The Queen, moreover, explored the site of the ancient Lavinium, consisting of a small hill, the original polis, which is occupied by the eastern castle of Tor Paterno, and the city walls in small blocks the gray green tufa used in the finest buildings of Rome as well the streets. She discovered a necropolis, where she found the obelisk of the first iron age, including sword of the Aegean type, which seems to confirm the tradition of Aeneas' visit to Italy.

Protestants In Rome.

The Protestants are to have a large right in the capital of the man Catholic church, namely, Rome. And not only is the college to be the seat of the government of the Catholic church, but it is to be the highest and most prominent of the city, at the top of Monte Marie, that rises sheer 390 feet above the Via Trionfale, the place along which Julius Caesar passed his triumphal procession. The tract for the land was signed on 24 last, and the building to be erected will be up-to-date and thoroughly equipped along all lines. The object is being carried out by the Methodist Episcopal church.

SUSPENDED ANIMATION.

If This Scientist Succeeds We Will Have a New Economic Era.

A remarkable suggestion is advanced by a Russian scientist. Could the vital functions of animals be completely suspended for a period and then restored to full vigor an economic revolution would result. The stock on the farm which yields no profit in the winter, such as bees and sheep, might literally be laid aside until spring, costing nothing during the unproductive season and yielding a profit as soon as they began to incur expense.

The cost of shipping live stock of all kinds would fall to the irreducible minimum. With vital functions suspended all kinds of animals, birds and fish could be made to occupy the smallest possible space in the transporting vehicle and carried without injury to themselves or of any deterioration in their food value, to be received in full flesh and vigor at the end of the journey or when needed for use.

Such a hiatus in the existence of man could if he brought about successfully would add materially to his apparent life span and tide him over many critical periods.

Such are the thoughts occupying the mind of the Russian scientist, who is making exhaustive experiments along the very lines which suggest them. He has succeeded in suspending the vital functions of lower organisms by drying and restoring them by the application of moisture.

He has accomplished the same ends in some insects by submitting them to varying degrees of low temperature and afterward applying heat.

Now he is gradually ascending in the scale of life, but with the frank confession that he dares not hope that his successes will reach the height to which he aspires.—Boston Herald.

Prussian Executions.

By the German law all capital punishments must be carried out by beheading, but it is left to the separate states to choose their own method. In those districts which were annexed by Napoleon I, the guillotine still prevails. Other regions may use the ax, the sword, or a carving knife if they please. The Prussian method is that the victim sitting in a chair, be beheaded by a horizontal sweep of a long sword.—Manchester News.

He Knew That Much.

SOME SURE THINGS.

Do Not Bet Upon Your Ability to Perform These Feats.

Bets to be avoided by those who are cocksure they can do all things are those relating to athletic feats. It would seem that a good runner could easily give a start of fifty yards in a hundred to a man who was doing the fifty yards by hopping on one leg. But few runners, if any, can afford to give that amount of start to any man who is at all strong on his legs. For the first five yards or so they go at practically the same pace, so that to run ninety-five yards while his opponent is hopping forty-five he has to go more than twice as fast, and it is a weak man indeed who cannot hop fifty yards in ten seconds.

An ordinary wooden match is easily broken in the fingers; but, although there are many who will bet they can do it, none succeed in accomplishing the task if the match is laid across the nail of the middle finger of either hand and pressed upon by the first and third fingers of that hand, despite its seeming so easy at first sight.

No one can crush an egg placed lengthwise between his clasped hands—that is, if the egg be sound and has the ordinary shell of a hen's egg.

It is safe to bet a man that he cannot get out of a chair without bending his body forward or putting his feet under it if he is sitting on it, not at the edge of it.

Another equally certain wager is that a man cannot stand at the side of a room with both of his feet touching the wainscoting lengthwise.

It is safe to bet any man, save one who is blind, that he cannot stand for five minutes without moving if he is blindfolded.

Too Talented.

"Where is that barber who used to have the end chair?" asked the customer.

"We had to let him go," replied the boss. "He had too much talent."

"Whaddy ya meann—talent?" asked the customer.

"He got so he illustrated his stories with cuts when he was shaving people," explained the boss.—Cincinnati Enquirer.

Just an Oversight.

It was 9 o'clock in the morning in an English town, and the roads were blocked with snow. The maid, who had been given a week's notice, was facing the last day of her sojourn in the house. She handed the usual cup of tea to her mistress in bed and then said sweetly, "Oh, ma'am, when ye asked me yesterday if we had everything in for tonight's party I forgot to tell ye we are out of coal and the furnace is goin' out."

BEAU FIELDING A PUZZLE.

He Was the Enigma of English Social Life in His Day.

Beau Fielding was a young man of fashion in the reign of William III. His house was sumptuously furnished, his hunters, hacks and racers were of great value, and "he kept a table of princely hospitality." He had no ostensible source of income, yet appeared to be rolling in wealth. All that was known of him was that he was the fifth son of Thomas Wilson, an impoverished gentleman of Leicestershire. Evelyn describes him as a very young man, "civil and good natured, but of no great force of character," and "very sober and of good fame." All attempts to discover his secret were vain. "In his most careless hours of amusement he kept a strict guard over his tongue and left gossip to conjecture what it pleased."

He redeemed his father's estate and portioned off his sisters and when remonstrated with on his extravagance replied that, however long his life should last, he would always have enough to live in the same way. Some said it was he who had robbed the Holland mail, for which another man had suffered; others that he depended upon the gambling table, though he never played for large sums. He was the enigma of social life till his career was cut short by a duel. His adversary was at that time a young man about town like himself, John Law, who afterward became the founder of the famous Mississippi scheme by which half of France was ruined. When the mysterious Beau died he left only a few pounds behind him and not a scrap of evidence to enlighten public curiosity.

Mistaken Courtesy.

An old Irish countrywoman going to Dublin by train, says The London Times, stepped into a first-class carriage with her basket and made herself comfortable.

Just before the train started the conductor passed along and, noticing the woman and the basket, said gruffly:

"Are you first-class, my good woman?"

"Begor, I am, and thank you," she replied with a smile, "and how do you feel yourself?"

Age of the Earth.

No one who has attempted to estimate the age of the earth by scientific methods has arrived at a result smaller than 50,000,000 years. Above this the figures run up to 1,000,000,000, so every one is free to take his choice, for when Mother Earth has once owned up to 50,000,000 she can scarcely object to being credited with a few hundred millions more.

"Ostend? Ah! Now, madame, will you so far confide in me as to say what your chief object is, to recover your lost property, to punish the thief, or to get to the bottom of the mystery?"

"I suppose one includes all three. I think I most desire the power to punish."

The detective looked at her again with the peculiar steady, immovable expression, as before.

"I will do my best. In fact, I shall put my whole experience and powers of observation into my work, for it is no common task you have set me."

"I know it," said Mrs. Ruthven, and paused abruptly, as if she arrested the words which were on her lips. "Must you go to Evesleigh?"

"Yes! I shall know my ground better if I do."

Then she asked his terms. He named a fair remuneration for his time, besides traveling expenses, and all outgoings.

"But should I succeed?" he added and paused expressively.

"I shall reward you as you deserve," said Mrs. Ruthven, with emphasis.

"It may be a long and fruitless undertaking, unless indeed you can give me some help," returned Waite, looking down and softly tapping the table with his large, square-topped fingers.

"If I can I will, most assuredly," she said, in clear resolute tones, "but I can not stay longer now; make your inspection of Evesleigh, then come to me, I am visible between nine and eleven. Always send up a note—not your name—and you shall be admitted."

"I thank you, madame. I should like also to see this gentleman," touching the card.

"You shall, Mr. Waite, that I promise," returned Mrs. Ruthven, readily. "Now send for a cab, I must not stay longer."

Mr. Waite despatched a neat little servant-girl for a conveyance, and Mrs. Ruthven returned to her hotel, breaking her journey as before.

CHAPTER VII.

Lady Dorrington was exceedingly anxious that both Mrs. Ruthven and her brother should visit her at the shooting lodge which Lord Dorrington rented in Scotland. She feared the effect of her heavy loss on the wealthy widow's mind, and she was anxious that her brother should not lose his chance. She could not understand why Clifford did not strike home and win the prize. The keen worldly woman had a very soft spot in her heart for the brother who so often angered her. To see him and the family estate free from debt would fulfill her heart's desire, and she thought Mrs. Ruthven a charming little woman, well fitted to be lady of the manor. Lady Dorrington's geese were apt to become swan-like in proportion to their utility.

"That might answer, though there are enough hiding-places in London to shelter most rogues, and the less a secret is fenced with precautions the safer it often is."

Here Mrs. Ruthven's courier brought her a card.

"Oh! Captain Shirley. Yes, I will see him. Be with me here at seven this evening," she said, low and hurriedly. "I will give you some important directions."

Waite bowed as "Captain Shirley" was announced.

"So you really have come back? I thought you had deserted me," said Mrs. Ruthven, with languid graciousness, as she stretched out her hand.

"My absence was, you may be sure, unavoidable," he returned, with a quick inquisitive glance at the detective.

"This," said Mrs. Ruthven, "is the celebrated Mr. Waite."

"Oh, indeed?" His brows knit themselves for a moment. "Then you have found him for yourself?"

"I have. When in doubt, play a trump, and my trump has always been self-help."

"No one can help themselves better. And what have you done?"

"As yet but very little. Eh? Mr. Waite?"

"It is a difficult case, very. I have, however, formed some idea."

"Indeed!" cried Shirley, eagerly. "And that is—"

"Not to be talked about at present. I shall only say that my suspicions point to a foreigner, whom I shall have to follow. Perhaps, sir, you would be so good as to tell me what you remember of the ball—I mean the night Mrs. Ruthven's rubies were stolen?"

"Oh, my recollections are of little use. I was not dancing, but finding the heat oppressive, I went outside, and, seeing one of the servants, asked him to bring me a case of cigarettes from the smoking-room, which were remarkably good. So I missed being of any use at the first discovery of the outrage."

"Pray, was this servant one who waited on you?"

"No, he was a sort of under-butler."

"Was he English?"

"I think not."

"There were various strange servants engaged for a short time," put in Mrs. Ruthven, "as the party was got up suddenly."

"Have you any idea if this man was French or Dutch?"

"Not the least."

"Or if he were in any way connected with Mrs. Ruthven's maid?"

"How the devil should I know?" cried Shirley, angrily. "I never spoke to Mrs. Ruthven's maid in my life."

"Lord Dorrington. No! I now remember, he only said Mrs. Ruthven was faint. It was Mr. Marsden himself who told me, and I assisted in the search he made in the shrubbery."

deal away that year."

"Well, the pretty wife died when their baby was born, and every one was very much concerned. I was god-mother to the little girl. He went home, and I lost sight of him; now he applies to me for help to keep his daughter at school."

"I hope you are not going to throw away your money without inquiry into the case?" said Shirley.

"No, I am not quite so impulsive. I shall tell him to call and let me hear all he has to tell. And now I am going to treat you without ceremony, and send you away, as I want to write some letters. Are you disengaged to-morrow?"

"Yes; quite disengaged."

"Then, if you come here at two or half-past, I will drive you down to have a look at the Twickenham villa."

"A thousand thanks. I shall be here punctually."

When he was gone, Mrs. Ruthven re-opened one of her notes and read: "You are really too hard in your refusal to see me!" "He has not been so persevering," she murmured, interrupting herself—"I beg you will permit me to enter your enchanted and enchanting presence this evening, as I am tempted to believe I might find some trace of your lost jewels among the jew dealers in Amsterdam. A friend of mine, an artist, was telling me yesterday of an old Father Abraham, who lives in an obscure lane, yet has marvels of brilliancy and beauty in his stores, and is by no means particular as to the sources from which he collects them. Now I propose to visit the patriarch myself, but should like to have some talk with you first. If I may come, let me have a word in reply. I do not propose to be long away, after my plans are—well, you shall make them for me if you will."

"Yours devotedly,
"CLIFFORD MARSDEN."

Mrs. Ruthven's face changed more than once as she read this. It softened, and then she flushed, while her eyes gleamed angrily.

"I can not see him to-night; that is out of the question, and he shall not go without seeing me. Where has he been? I wonder if he has been at Evesleigh, riding with Nora L'Estrange? I will write to her; I shall ask him." She seized her pen and wrote rapidly:

"Not this evening, dear Mr. Marsden. I am engaged; but come to luncheon with me to-morrow at one. I have much to say to you, and by no means approve your wasting your time in a fruitless attempt to recover my lost jewels."

"Ever yours,
"CELIA RUTHVEN."

Marsden, however, had not been down to Evesleigh and Nora L'Estrange. He had found occupation in London, and time had not hung heavy on his hands. Mrs. Ruthven's invitation was far from acceptable; he was eager to start on his voyage of discovery, but he felt it would be more prudent to accept.

"I must keep her in good humor for some time longer," he thought, as he penned a pleasantly worded reply. "She is a vindictive little animal, and I must be clear of this trusteeship before I can venture to show my hand. What a rich harvest I deserve for my patience and diplomacy? Shall I reap it? Yes, it's worth trying for."

Mrs. Ruthven was unusually particular in ordering luncheon, though at no time was she indifferent as to what she ate and drank, and as to what she put on. A very becoming costume of dark blue plush and cashmere, made her fairly content with herself, while her thick, shining au-

You will be sorry to hear that friend De Meudon has been dangerously ill. I will try to return Paris, and have a look at him."

"Yes, I am sorry," said Mrs. Ruthven.

"Then, I may only get on track of your jewels, and have to further a-field to discover them. The way, have you any note of its size and weight?"

"Only of some—a few. But I wish you would not go off on such wild-goose chase. As for me, I weary of the subject, and incline to let them go! The whole affair has depressed and exhausted me. I feel pursued by an evil fate—as if everything was insecure—I never safe!"

"Merely morbid feeling, such you accused me of indulging in, proves that you ought never to be left alone! Why do you think going to so heathenish a place as Folkestone? My sister will only too delighted, if you will go to Chedworth, Dorrington's place in Hampshire. They will be there about a fortnight, and get so pleasant people to meet you."

"You are very kind! But at present I want to be quiet—and—"

"Captain Shirley," announced waiter.

Marsden elevated his eyebrows interrogatively, and Mrs. Ruthven plied with a smile.

"I beg a thousand pardons," said Shirley, a sullen look of annoyance clouding his face. "I thought you were alone."

"I assure you I am very glad to see you," cried Mrs. Ruthven, gaily. "I have been trying to feed an inexorable trustee, here, into good humor, to get his consent to my purchase. Come and help me; a pray take some luncheon."

"I have already lunched, thank you."

"A glass of Burgundy, then? Thank you, I assure you, is not to be despised. Shirley condescended to take glass—and began to thaw."

"Come into the next room," said Mrs. Ruthven, leading the way; and, nestling into the corner of a large sofa, she proceeded to coquette with both her visitors.

"Mr. Marsden is going all the way to Amsterdam, on the chance of firing his poor rubies," she remarked after a little discursive chatter. "It is not good of him?"

"We would all go further than Amsterdam, if we thought we could find them," said Shirley, gallantly.

"If? Yes, that is just it. But is too far for a mere chance."

"The way, how far is Amsterdam from Ostend?" asked Mrs. Ruthven, in curious mocking tone.

"I really do not know," returned Shirley, gravely, and looking very straight at her, his face darkening.

"Why do you ask?"

Mrs. Ruthven was saved the difficulty of answering, as her courier came in before she could reply, handing a card to his mistress, as he did.

"Will you receive the gentleman, madame?"

"Oh, yes, show him up." The waiter with a little confidential nod to Shirley, she added:

"This is my engineer!"

"He has lost no time," he returned.

"I shall not let him stay long. I will tell you all about him afterwards"—to Marsden.

Shirley looked sharply at the door but Marsden seemed too much occupied with his own thoughts to hear what was going on.

In a few minutes a middle-aged man of average height, with iron gray moustaches and whiskers, his right arm in a sling, came into the room, and made a deferential though clumsy, bow.

...that her brother should not lose his chance. She could not understand why Clifford did not strike home and win the prize. The keen worldly woman had a very soft spot in her heart for the brother who so often angered her. To see him and the family estate free from debt would fulfill her heart's desire, and she thought Mrs. Ruthven a charming little woman, well fitted to be lady of the manor. Lady Dorrington's geese were apt to become swan-like in proportion to their utility. "As to her having a dash of the tar-brush—it is all nonsense," she would say to those detractors who urged this objection, "both her father and mother were Europeans; some far-away grandfather was an Indian prince—that is no disadvantage in my opinion."

But no amount of pressing could induce Mrs. Ruthven to quit the murky metropolis. She had heard of a charming villa on the river at Twickenham, and she was anxious to purchase it. This, and her dread of the Northern climate, compelled her to refuse her dear Lady Dorrington.

Marsden, having called twice without having been admitted, had not again presented himself, yet Mrs. Ruthven did not find time hang heavily on her hands. She went more than once to see her man of business respecting the purchase she wished to make, for she was keenly interested in financial matters and eager to get the full worth of her money, and she had a long and exceedingly confidential interview with Waite after his return from Evesleigh.

At the end of a fortnight from the date of the robbery Shirley announced his return, after, he said, having seen his sister start for the Riviera, for Mrs. Ruthven had really been out when he called.

It was a dull but dry morning, and Mrs. Ruthven was sitting in a low chair beside the fire, talking to Waite who had been reading over some memoranda to her.

"I think I have formed a distinct plan now," he said, after a pause, "by which I hope at least to unravel the plot. I must dog the suspected culprit by day and by night."

"You must," she returned.

"It will be costly, madame."

"I can not help that; only find out the truth."

There was another pause.

"You are not an Englishman?"

said Mrs. Ruthven, suddenly.

"A naturalized Englishman. My mother was English."

"And your father?"

"A Pole. I resided both in Germany and France in my youth, and am able to speak several languages, which I find very useful."

"I expect Captain Shirley here immediately. We must deal cautiously with him," Mrs. Ruthven resumed. "He is very shrewd and suspicious, and will, I know, disapprove of my applying to you without his interposition."

"Then he should not have ran off to Ostend when he might have been wanted," said Waite, grimly. "Time in such matters is valuable, as I dare say he knows, and we have lost a great deal."

"Now, Mr. Waite, after you and Captain Shirley have seen each other; I should like to test your power of disguising yourself."

"I am ready to submit to any test you choose, madame."

"Good. I shall arrange for Captain Shirley to call upon me to-morrow, and you shall appear in a different character. Will you venture so much?"

"Certainly."

"It might answer another purpose also," she resumed, thoughtfully. "At all events you must appear to go abroad."

nected with Mrs. Ruthven's maid?"
"How the devil should I know?" cried Shirley, angrily. "I never spoke to Mrs. Ruthven's maid in my life."
"Lord Dorrington. No! I now remember, he only said Mrs. Ruthven was faint. It was Mr. Marsden himself who told me, and I assisted in the search he made in the shrubbery."

"What was your impression?"

"Oh, it was and is that the jewels are irreparably lost. I fear there is no chance of their recovery."

"Have you any idea of their value?"

"No; that is I am of course aware they are very valuable, but their exact worth I do not think I have ever heard."

"I thought you must have known, because they were so much talked about when I was married, and you were in the regiment," said Mrs. Ruthven, with an air of unconscious simplicity.

"Well, I do not remember if I did," he returned.

"I have trespassed too long on your time," said Waite, bowing deferentially. "If nothing fresh turns up I shall start for the Continent to-morrow, and your address, madame, will be—"

"Oh, I am not sure. I think of staying awhile at Folkestone; it would be easy to see you there if you want to consult me, and London is too intolerable. Meantime address to the care of my solicitors."

Waite bowed again and retired.

"He does not strike me as anything very wonderful!" said Shirley, changing his place to one nearer hers, "and I had hoped to have spoken to him first myself. You are hardly fit to deal with such gentry. I had hoped you had confidence in me."

"My dear Shirley, this is nonsense," she interrupted, coolly.

"Time was too valuable to be wasted, waiting while you were running after your sister! As to confidence, looking straight into his eyes, you ought to know me by this time! I give my full confidence to no one; we can be useful to each other, but sentimental nonsense would neutralize all that. Now I am resolved, in this matter of the rubies, to have nothing to do with any one but Waite. When I have anything of importance to tell and choose to tell it to you I will. You may be offended with me or not, as you like, I am ready to remain your friend, but I in no way fear you as an enemy. I will spare nothing and no one to get to the bottom of this mysterious affair."

"You are an extraordinary woman, you always were," said Shirley, looking at her earnestly, distrustfully. "You wound me in every way, yet I can not break with you."
"It is wiser not, nor is it necessary; you have no reason to quarrel with me."
Shirley resumed after a moment's silence: "I suppose Marsden is in town. Does he know you have secured this treasure of a detective?"
"No!" sharply. "I thought I told you I did not wish any one to know I was employing any one except those rusty creatures, the regular police. Pray be silent respecting Waite."

"Certainly if you wish it."

Here Mrs. Ruthven's servant brought several letters on a salver. She opened and glanced at some, closing them up again carefully, then she said, with a half smile:

"Do you remember an English engineer, a Mr. Colville, who was employed on the railway, near Umballa? A better sort of man, who had a very pretty wife?"

"I can not say I do. I was a good mal, and I must be clear of this trusteeship before I can venture to show my hand. What a rich harvest I deserve for my patience and diplomacy? Shall I reap it? Yes, it's worth trying for."

Mrs. Ruthven was unusually particular in ordering luncheon, though at no time was she indifferent as to what she eat and drank, and as to what she put on. A very becoming costume of dark blue plush and cashmere, made her fairly content with herself, while her thick, shining, auburn-gold hair was crowned by a dainty little lace cap, with pale blue ribbons.

Marsden was delightfully punctual, and, in his admirably cut frock-coat, with a delicate button-hole bouquet, his high-bred face and beautiful soft, sleepy blue eyes, looked so handsome and distinguished that Mrs. Ruthven thought a woman might be excused for making a fool of herself about him.

"And how are you, dear Mrs. Ruthven, after these long days? What sin did I commit that you forbid me your presence?" exclaimed Marsden, holding her hand tenderly, a moment longer than was quite conventional, and looking into her eyes.

"Forbid you my presence?" she repeated, laughing. "Once when you called I was really out, and once—I was really engaged!"

"Do you mean that is the beggarly account of all my attempts to see you? Why, I was here four, five, six times, at least—"

"Then they omitted to tell me! Do not let us quarrel about the exact number, Mr. Marsden! tell me some Evesleigh news. How are your charming relatives at Brookdale?"

"I really do not know. I have never heard of them since we left my ill-fated house. Do you know, I can not bear the idea of going there, and I had intended to hunt Blankshire this winter."

"You must not allow yourself to grow morbid; I shall regret the loss of my pretty rubies more than ever! Come, luncheon is ready in the next room."

While the servants were in the room they talked of ordinary subjects, but Mrs. Ruthven soon managed to get rid of them, and resisting the temptation of listening to Marsden's charming voice and flattering speeches, she took the direction of the conversation into her own hands.

"You must not be long away," she said. "I shall want a tolerably large sum of money soon," and proceeded to tell of the opportunity which offered of purchasing the desirable villa at Twickenham; after enlarging on its merits, she continued:

"I always wished for a place of that sort. It is so nice for fetes and pretty recherche parties. Besides, I may as well lay out some of that money which is lying idle in the Three-per-Cents, so you must come back in time to pay it."

She looked up suddenly with a smile and a keen glance, and Marsden met it with his usual lazy, good-humored expression.

"Very well," he said, "the cash shall be ready when and where you will. What are you going to give for this new toy?"

"Thirty-three thousand five hundred."

"That is a long price, my dear Mrs. Ruthven."

"Not too long, I think; there are some fields attached which insure privacy at present, and are worth a good deal as building land. Then there is a good deal of handsome old-fashioned furniture in the house."

"Oh! if your solicitors are satisfied, I have nothing to say against it. My business faculties are of the lowest order. I fear, however, that I can not return before Saturday-week."

ed.
"I shall not let him stay long will tell you all about him a ward"—to Marsden.

Shirley looked sharply at the d but Marsden seemed too much occupied with his own thoughts to what was going on.

In a few minutes a middle-aged man of average height, with gray moustaches and whiskers, right arm in a sling, came into room, and made a deferent though clumsy, bow.

"Good-morning, Mr. Colville," Mrs. Ruthven, who had risen, was standing beside a table near of the windows. "You have lost time in answering my note."

"I was anxious to thank you your kindness in writing," he turned, in a low, hoarse voice.

"And how is your little girl?" continued Mrs. Ruthven. "Let me she must be nearly eight?"

"No, ma'am, she is nearly so and looks less. She is a delicate weakly little creature, that's what am anxious to keep her away in country."

"Very naturally. I am sorry can not attend to you to-day, Colville," graciously, "you see I engaged with this gentleman, Captain Shirley," bending her head in the direction of the latter. "If you will call to-morrow, I give you half an hour; do not later than twelve."

"I shall be punctual, and I thank you."

"Wait for a moment," said Mrs. Ruthven. "I have a little gift for my goddaughter." She went her writing-table, and took from drawer a small packet tied with ribbon, which she placed in hands.

"You are very good, madame," said, as with another clumsy bow and a look at each gentleman, he the room.

"Do you not remember him all?" asked Mrs. Ruthven.

"No," returned Shirley. "I never saw him before, and I can not he looks the sort of man I should be inclined to trust."

"You are too suspicious. The fellow has been unlucky, his head was broken in some machinery, he is out of work."

"I have a fellow-feeling with unlucky," said Marsden, rousing himself. "I've not had much good in myself."

"Why you seem to me a remarkably lucky man," said Shirley.

"By the way, Captain Shirley began Mrs. Ruthven, in a languid tone. "I hope you will excuse for breaking my engagement; but my head is quite too bad to drive do to Twickenham. It would not worth while going in a closed carriage, and with my neuralgia an one is not to be thought of."

"Pray do not dream of intruding yourself on my account said Shirley, turning white. "But you do not need me, I have business to attend to in the city, and I bid you good-morning." He bowed to Marsden and went away quickly.

"How cross he is," said Mrs. Ruthven, as the door closed to him.

"Yes, poor devil," returned Marsden, carelessly, "you treat him rather badly."

"Why does he court bad treatment? I do not want him to come here."

"There is a strong dash of cruelty in you, charming though you are."

"Do you think so?" looking down and speaking softly. "Yes, I am capable of taking my revenge, believe me," her lips quivered as she spoke. "I am quite sure these pretty little hands could strike a venally; but they could carelessly too."

"Clifford!" she exclaimed, with sudden emotion, then, correcting her

He pressed her hand, and was gone.

Mrs. Ruthven grew very pale, as she stood for a moment in thought, and pressed her handkerchief to her smiling at her own image.

"I should never be alone," she murmured. "Does he mean to be my

CHAPTER VIII.

The result of Miss L'Estrange's self-commune was very perceptible, at least, to herself. The careful watch she established over her own words and manner, however, was too delicately exercised to be in any way remarkable. She was bright and frank as ever, but she slid easily away from any approach to sentimental subjects, though talking readily on other topics. The chief change was an increase of animation and a tendency to mock at what used to touch her. Mrs. L'Estrange only noticed that Nora was in remarkably good spirits.

Winton sometimes looked a little surprised, and bestowed more of his conversation on his older acquaintance than he used.

The quiet weeks went by swiftly, their monotony broken by occasional dinners at the houses of the cathedral dignitaries at Oldbridge, where Nora's songs and lively talk,
and Mrs. L'Estrange's gentle tact and sympathetic "listening," made both welcome guests.

October was more than half over,
and hunting had begun—a congenial amusement which interfered a good deal with Winton's frequent visits to Brookdale. The rapid falling of the leaves, and a succession of stormy nights, made Mrs. L'Estrange think seriously of spending November and December in town—a proposition which Nora originally urged.

Mrs. Ruthven wrote at length, very amiably:

She was detained in town by business, she said. She was in treaty for a pretty villa on the Thames, and would be delighted to have Miss L'Estrange's counsel and assistance when she set about furnishing.

Mr. Marsden had been so good in trying to find her jewels, and had gone to Amsterdam in search of them, but all in vain. Was he at Evesleigh? for no one seemed to know what had become of him.

"Do you know I think it would be very nice to help Mrs. Ruthven in choosing her furniture? Shall I tell perhaps his bad health made him worse. I must take care I do not grow hard and selfish myself. I wish I were busier! my life is too easy; it leaves me too much time to think; I must not think."

And she applied herself diligently to a piece of Chopin's, bristling with accidentals and crabbed passages, till Bea, with a radiant face, came to tell her it was time to get ready.

The walk through Evesleigh Woods and across the park was delightful.
It was a soft autumnal morning, slightly leaden in coloring, like one of Wouverman's landscapes, as if nature gently mourned her departed youth, the pines and larches gave out their aromatic odors, the ground was thickly strewn with red, withered leaves from the beech trees, for which Evesleigh was famous, and when the trio reached Crowland Gate, which opened on a wide common, where the woods ended and an undergrowth of brushwood and furze afforded abundant cover, a tolerable field had assembled, but not many spectators. The rector's daughter on horseback, the curate's little children, with their governess, on foot, the banker's wife from Oldbridge, in her smart carriage, with a couple of visitors from London.

Every one knew every one else, and greetings were exchanged. Winton, who rode a powerful chestnut, with the temper that color is usually supposed to entail, managed to keep the fery creature still for a moment beside Mrs. L'Estrange.

"Very glad to have caught a glimpse of you. I am going off tomorrow to Devonshire, an old Indian chum of mine has asked me to share his hunting quarters in a splendid country. I hope I shall find you in town next month. You'll let me know your movements?"

"Yes; certainly. We shall miss you very much."

"I hope you will, unlikely though it seems. We must do some plays when we meet. Good-bye, Miss L'- Estrange!" He stretched out his hand to Nora, who had taken a vantage post on a stile, pressing his horse with heel and knee to make it approach, but the animal kicked and resisted, glancing round with wild, wicked eyes.

"Consider yourself shaken hands with," said Nora, laughing and shrinking, "I am afraid of your horse."

At that instant the hounds gave tongue. "They've found; they're away," cried every one. Winton's horse, wildly excited, tried to bolt, and strove by every device that could enter into the heart of a foal to unseat his rider, rearing straight up, buck-jumping, lashing out with his heels, in vain. A hand of iron controlled him, and the firm grip of the knees was not to be shaken.
At last he darted off in the direction his rider chose, like a bolt from a catapult. During this struggle Mrs. L'Estrange covered her eyes, but Nora could not remove "Nothing whatever. She seems to despair of recovering them."

"It was a frightful business altogether!" exclaimed Mary Damer, the rector's second daughter. "Do you remember a Captain Shirley who was at the ball. You danced with him several times. He danced very well."

Nora did remember.
"George says there were queer reports about him in India. He was in the same regiment as Mr. or Major Ruthven. People said, too, that Mrs. Ruthven was—well, not too particular."

"I only know she is particularly nice," returned Nora. "Do not believe half the ill-natured things you hear."

"I wish," said Miss Damer, "that Mr. Marsden had not been frightened away by the worry of this unlucky robbery. How nice it would be to have Evesleigh open once more."

"Do tell me, Miss L'Estrange," cried the younger sister, "is the squire engaged to Mrs. Ruthven?"

"Indeed, I do not know; but I am sure she would make a very pleasant mistress for the manor house. Now, I must not stay, it will be dusk before I get back."

"I think you are quite heartless, not to stay and hear if poor Mr.
Winton came alive out of the hunt, and he is such a great friend of yours."

"Oh! he can take care of himself," said Nora, and with a few more words she escaped, her heart beating with annoyance at the tone of Miss Damer's last remark. She would certainly persuade Helen to come up to town next week, or as soon as possible, and then would take singing lessons, and amuse herself, and forget the folly and weakness into which she had fallen. "How ill-natured people are," she thought, "and ready to spread ill-natured stories."
She did not believe that Captain Shirley ever did anything disgraceful, though she had not been favorably impressed by him, and was disposed, in an instinctive and unreasoning way, to dislike and distrust him.

Large drops of rain made her hur-shall not let him stay long. I told you all about him after-dinner—to Marsden.

Shirley looked sharply at the door; Marsden seemed too much occupied with his own thoughts to heed what was going on.

A few minutes a middle-aged woman of average height, with iron-moustaches and whiskers, his arm in a sling, came into the room, and made a deferential, clumsy bow.

"Good-morning, Mr. Colville," said Ruthven, who had risen, and standing beside a table near one of the windows. "You have lost no time in answering my note."

She was anxious to thank you for your kindness in writing," he replied, in a low, hoarse voice.

"And how is your little girl?" asked Mrs. Ruthven. "Let me see, must be nearly eight?"

"No, ma'am, she is nearly seven, looks less. She is a delicate, little creature, that's why I am anxious to keep her away in the country."

"Very naturally. I am sorry I cannot attend to you to-day, Mr. Colville," graciously. "You see I am engaged with this gentleman, and Captain Shirley," bending her head in the direction of the latter. "But you will call to-morrow. I can give you half an hour; do not be later than twelve."

"I shall be punctual, and I thank you for a moment," said Mrs. Ruthven. "I have a little gift here, my goddaughter." She went to the writing-table, and took from a drawer a small packet tied with a ribbon, which she placed in his hands.

"You are very good, madame," he said, as with another clumsy bow he took a look at each gentleman, he left the room.

"Do you not remember him at all?" asked Mrs. Ruthven.

"No," returned Shirley. "I never knew him before, and I can not say I look the sort of man I should expect to find."

"You are too suspicious. The poor fellow has been unlucky, his arm broken in some machinery, and he is out of work."

"I have a fellow-feeling with the poor fellow," said Marsden, rousing himself. "I've not had much good luck lately."

"Why do you seem to me a remarkably good man," said Shirley.

"By the way, Captain Shirley," said Mrs. Ruthven, in a languid tone. "I hope you will excuse me for breaking my engagement; but my husband is quite too bad to drive down to Wickham. It would not be wise while going in a closed car, and with my neuralgia an open one is not to be thought of."

"I am sorry to hear of it," said Mrs. Ruthven, turning white. "But as you do not need me, I have business to attend to in the city, and will give you good-morning." He bowed to Marsden and went away quickly.

"Now cross he is," said Mrs. Ruthven, as the door closed to him. "Yes, poor devil," returned Marsden carelessly, "you treat him rather badly."

"Why does he court bad treatment? I do not want him to come here. There is a strong dash of cruelty about him, charming though you are."

"Do you think so?" looking down, speaking softly. "Yes, I am capable of taking my revenge, believe me, her lips quivered as she spoke. I am quite sure these pretty little hands could strike unmercifully; but they could caress tenfold!" she exclaimed, with an emotion, then, correcting her-for a pretty villa on the Thames, and would be delighted to have Miss L'Estrange's counsel and assistance when she set about furnishing.

Mr. Marsden had been so good in trying to find her jewels, and had gone to Amsterdam in search of them, but all in vain. Was he at Evesleigh? for no one seemed to know what had become of him.

"Do you know I think it would be very nice to help Mrs. Ruthven in choosing her furniture? Shall I tell her we are thinking of going up to town? Perhaps she would take rooms for us," said Nora, when she had read this letter aloud at breakfast.

"My dear Nora! she would not care for the trouble, and what a price she would agree to give for rooms! We must be very prudent; my little savings during the latter part of our stay in Germany will not go far."

"Oh, yes! I forgot. You are really a wonderful woman, Helen! I shall never be such an economist, but as to not caring for the trouble, I do not think you quiet do Mrs. Ruthven justice; you and Mr. Winton are always of the same opinion, and I think you have caught his prejudice against her."

"I am not as much fascinated as you are, and I must say, I am a good deal influenced by Mark Winton; when I look back"—she stopped abruptly. Nora, who longed to hear her reminiscences, gazed earnestly at her, and Mrs. L'Estrange, raising her eyes suddenly, encountered those of her step-daughter fixed upon her, and colored through her delicate pale skin, to Nora's great surprise. "Some day," said Mrs. L'Estrange, quickly, and with some confusion, "I must tell you my little history; every one has some touch of romance in their lives, even so prosaic a person as I am."

"Do, dear; tell it to me now."

"Now? Oh, no, I must interview cook, and plan the dinner; the romance of the past must give way to the needs of the present, vulgar though they be; some evening, by the fire-light, I will prose about days gone by. It is fine and calm to-day; let us give Bea a holiday, and walk across the park. The meet is at Crowland Gate, and we will see the hounds throw off."

"By all means, I feel as if I wanted to be in the open air."

Mrs. L'Estrange went away to her household duties. Nora sauntered into the drawing-room and sat down at the piano, but she did not begin to play for some moments. Was it possible that her quiet, unselfish step-mother had had thrilling experiences? She was so reasonable, so wise in a simple way, that Nora could never imagine the irregularities and redundancy which constitute romance gathering round her. How good she had always been! even from her first entrance into the family. How she had stood between every one and her husband's hasty irritation; how much Nora herself owed to her justice and generosity. What a good influence she had been, how much she had endured from her selfish, unsympathetic husband, who looked upon her as a slave whom he had bought, and who had no rights, no title to consideration, whom he had married to be an upper servant. What a life of suppression, of careful conscientious sick-nursing she had had, without the reward of gratitude or recognition! From how much she had saved Nora herself! How strong and patient she had been.

"If I can reward her I will," thought Nora. "I do hope Bea will be a good, loving child; she is like my father, but no woman would be as selfish and troublesome as he was!"

what a fine figure he had. Would he come back safe after a run on such a vicious brute?

"I really thought Mr. Winton would have been killed," said the eldest of the rector's daughters. "How wonderfully he rides! My brother says he is a great 'shekary.' In fact, he cares for nothing else but sport. You were frightened, too, Miss L'Estrange?"

"I have not been used to horses for years," stammered Nora.

"You ought to ride now. I remember you managing your little sheltie capital, long ago. Won't you come back to luncheon at the rectory? Mother would be charmed to see you and Mrs. L'Estrange. Mrs. Gardner and her friends are coming."

Mrs. L'Estrange preferred returning with her little daughter, but Nora was glad to divert her thoughts by accepting the invitation, and was one of the most animated of the party. She could not, however, be persuaded to stay till the eldest son of the house, an officer on leave from his regiment in India, returned with a report of the run.

"I suppose Mrs. Ruthven has heard nothing of her jewels?" said Mrs. Gardiner, as Nora was saying good-

She did not believe that Captain Shirley ever did anything disgraceful, though she had not been favorably impressed by him, and was disposed, in an instinctive and unreasoning way, to dislike and distrust him.

Large drops of rain made her hurry on to gain shelter before the threatened storm burst; but as she crossed the carriage drive of Evesleigh Manor, on her homeward way, she noticed fresh traces of wheels and horses' feet. The steward had no doubt been up at the house. She caught a glimpse of it before she passed through the gate leading into the wood opposite her own home. How mournful it looked with its closed shutters, and the one thin thread of smoke rising from its wide stack of chimneys! She was quite glad to be safe at home, in her own comfortable bedroom, changing her dress for her in-door garments. She had grown stupidly nervous of late. One folly brings on another, she thought.

Modernize your Kitchen

One by one the bugbears of housekeeping are being put to rout through the instrumentality of gas. The modern kitchen—which means the all-gas kitchen—is now a recognized part of the up-to-date home. The all-gas kitchen lightens labor. It means a clean, wholesome, sanitary kitchen, as there is no coal dust or ashes to be spread around, and it becomes a real pleasure to work in it. Every housewife desires to cook and heat water in the most economical way, in the quickest, most dependable way, with the least possible work.

The All-Gas way is the solution to the problem.

The hot weather is here now and if you want a cool, comfortable kitchen this summer come and select your Gas Range and Water Heater now. We have ranges at all prices.

RED POLLED COWS AS MILK PRODUCERS

One of the most interesting contests ever conducted in any country between breeds is now going on at the Jean Duluth stock farm, which is located about nine miles westward from Duluth. writes Professor Thomas Shaw in the National Stockman.

The average results obtained in milk and butter fat from the two breeds for the years 1908, 1911 and 1912, in which the records are complete, show that the Guernsey cows gave 114.1 pounds more milk per cow than the Red Polleds and produced 43.1 pounds more butter fat per cow. The Red Polled heifers produced 471 pounds more milk than the Guernsey heifers, but the latter produced on the average 27.7 more pounds of butter fat.

One item in the comparison is lacking—that is, the beef production. The demand for the Red Polled males has been such that none of them have been grown for beef. But it is not show in England and the international fat stock show in Chicago.

When it is remembered that a large part of the Red Polled herd were all bred upon the farm it must be conceded that the results are very creditable to the breed and to the owners of the same. In the advanced registry for the breed twenty-four milk records came from this herd in 1913. It has now to its credit twenty official records that average 396 pounds of butter fat. In the herd is the cow Pear. This cow completed her last yearly record Dec. 27, 1913. She gave 13,100.6 pounds of milk, which gave 603.8 pounds of fat, the equivalent of 724.5 pounds of butter. This record makes her the champion producer of the breed. In four consecutive years she has produced 1,807.6 pounds of butter fat, a record that has not been equaled by any cow of any breed in Minnesota, and Minnesota is looked upon as a leading dairy state. In this herd is also Jean Duluth Beauty 31725, which as a heifer gave 10,019.8 pounds of milk and 442.05 pounds of butter fat. This gives her first place in the world's records for Red Polled heifers. She was bred on the farm. Mr. George P. Grout, the manager, states that ten cows from this herd in the 1913 advanced registry have 400.2 pounds of butter fat to their credit.

HEAD OF THE FLOCK.

Lambs Sired by Mature Rams Are Vigorous at Birth.

Because a ram lamb can be purchased more cheaply than an older animal a great many men begin breeding too early. As a rule, good results are obtained from a yearling—that is, a ram a year and a half old—but the tabulation of the weights of all of the lambs born in a large flock showed that the lambs sired by the older rams averaged heavier at birth. Certain it is that it is not wise to use a ram under a year old.

If the flock is large more than one ram should be kept. A good rule to follow is to provide a ram for each fifty ewes. If the ram is not unusually strong in constitution, however, even this number may prove to be too many. A ram that is overworked will not only be injured himself, but the last lambs will usually be found to be smaller than the rest and weaker in constitution.

The Milk of the Sow.

Experiments show that mature sows daily produce from four and nine tenths to seven pounds of milk per animal. One sow weighing 438 pounds

Farm and Garden

RAISING SMALL FRUITS.

Currants, Raspberries, Gooseberries and Blackberries Are Easily Grown.

Small fruits, such as currants, raspberries, gooseberries and blackberries are easily grown, and almost every gardener finds it profitable to have a few bushes of each kind on his place. The gooseberry is not made as much use of by American housewives as is the case in England, where it is a favorite small fruit, but in recent years the excellence of its food qualities has become recognized.

On a small place a dozen raspberry bushes may be planted without encroaching much on the garden plot. There are several varieties, the most familiar being the red and purple. There are also the pink and yellow and the blackcap. The red is for table use, and the black and purple are for canning purposes.

The plants should be set out as early as possible in spring after the ground has been plowed, harrowed and worked over until it is fine and mellow—almost pulverized, in fact. The soil should have had a covering of stable manure dug or forked into it and in general have been made rich in the essentials of plant food. Both the raspberry and blackberry are gross feeders, almost as much so as the grapevine, and require good ground.

Before putting in the plants they should be cut back to six or eight inch tops. They should be stuck into the ground as deep as they stood in the garden of the grower from whom they were purchased. This may be readily seen by the earth marks on each plant.

They may be set out in any one of three ways—in furrows, in hills or according to what is called the bush plan. The particular system to be employed is for the individual gardener to determine for himself, and in doing so he will be guided largely by the extent get weaker and finally dies. The practically no treatment for the ease that is worth while.

Practically the only successful treatment is to destroy the germs in quarters where the colt is to be foaled. The stall should be thoroughly cleaned

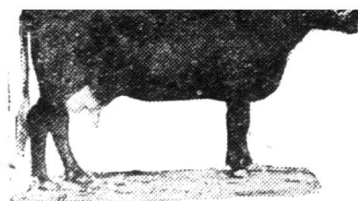

There is no good reason why a draft stallion should not work, as there are a good many reasons why he should work, says a Kansas horse breeder. Work is the only proof of the strength and stayer qualities of a work horse. An animal kept in idleness cannot be expected to possess any great amount of strength and endurance, and one of the strongest laws of breeding "like begets like." A horse cannot transmit good qualities which himself does not possess. The stallion pictured is a pure bred Shire.

out and disinfected with a 5 per cent solution of some of the coal tar on the market. After this disinfection the stall should be bedded with perfectly dry, clean straw. As soon as foaling is possible the navel of colt should be tied about an inch from the body with a string soaked in a tincture of iodine. The cord itself should be thoroughly painted with iodine as a good plan to apply the iodine several times at intervals of twelve hours.

If all these preventive measures have been carefully practiced danger of ing colts from the navel ill will be practically eliminated. Some colts may respond to careful veterinary treatment after the swelling of joints has commenced, but this treatment is complicated and must be charge of a thoroughly competent veterinarian. The preventive measures are so simple that they should always be used instead of waiting until disease manifests itself.

Silage For Calves.

Calves may be fed silage as soon as they are old enough to eat it. It is of greater importance that the silage be free from mold or decay when given to calves than when given to mature stock. They may be given all silage they will eat up clean at times. Yearling calves will consume about one-half as much as mature stock—that is, from fifteen to twenty or more pounds a day. When supplied with some good leguminous strong in constitution, however, even this number may prove to be too many. A ram that is overworked will not only be injured himself, but the last lambs will usually be found to be smaller than the rest and weaker in constitution.

The Milk of the Sow.

Experiments show that mature sows daily produce from four and nine-tenths to seven pounds of milk per animal. One sow weighing 438 pounds yielded seven and seven-tenths pounds of milk in a single day, during which period she consumed four pounds of cornmeal, four pounds of wheat middlings and eight pounds of skim milk. Average sow's milk contains about 6.1 per cent fat, 5.6 per cent milk sugar, 5.6 per cent casein and albumen and .98 per cent ash. In all respects it is richer than cow's milk.

The Young Sow.

See that the young sow raises the right number of pigs (from eight to ten, according to her capacity and milk flow) or none at all, as otherwise her udder will be poorly developed and she probably always will raise small litters

Before putting in the plants they should be cut back to six or eight inch tops. They should be stuck into the ground as deep as they stood in the garden of the grower from whom they were purchased. This may be readily seen by the earth marks on each plant. They may be set out in any one of three ways—in furrows, in hills or according to what is called the bush plan. The particular system to be employed is for the individual gardener to determine for himself, and in doing so he will be guided largely by the extent and shape of his plot.

The bush method is probably best adapted for a small place. Furrows are plowed six feet apart, and the plants are set in them at intervals of about three feet. During growth in summer the plants are trained into bushes by being pinched or cut back. The leading or principal shoot should be allowed to reach a height of not more than three and a half feet, and all laterals should be started near the ground and be held back to some eighteen or twenty inches in length. The plants will be bushy and will present a beautiful appearance, but this method calls for considerable pruning by the gardener.

Silage For Calves.

Calves may be fed silage as soon as they are old enough to eat it. It is of greater importance that silage be free from mold or decay given to calves than when given to mature stock. They may be given silage they will eat up clean a times. Yearling calves will consume about one-half as much as mature stock—that is, from fifteen to twenty or more pounds a day. When supplemented with some good leguminous hay little, if any, grain will be required to keep the calves in a thrifty, growing condition.

Salt For Asparagus.

Salt on asparagus beds will kill weeds and benefit the asparagus. Nitrate or German potash salt, is better than salt, but is somewhat more expensive. After kainit is applied, the beds should be worked into the top soil with a rake. A little later when the asparagus is growing well a dressing of nitrate of soda will be very beneficial.

BEEES AND ALFALFA.

Investigations of the United States department of agriculture have shown that a mistaken notion has been held regarding the kinds of bees that will "trip" alfalfa seed. While "leaf cutter" bees will "trip" about 90 per cent of flowers they visit and bumblebees about 50 per cent, honeybees less than 5 per cent. Even though honeybee trips only 5 per cent of flowers it visits the great number of such bees that can be kept on an alfalfa field, taken in connection with their activity, compensate for the inefficiency of each bee.

The wild bees that are most efficient in tripping do not store up honey of commercial value, nor is there any way known of holding them permanently in any locality.

Certain investigators have thought that some species of bee from the native land of alfalfa might prove more valuable than others. If such could be found and introduced the yield of alfalfa seed might be materially increased. There are so many different kinds of bees in different parts of the world that there is considerable room for experiment.

LIVE STOCK NOTES.

Plenty of salt is the best preventive of colic and indigestion.

Dock the lambs early. The shock is less when they are young.

It is best to feed young calves three times a day. They relish their dinner the same as you do.

Be gentle and quiet in handling the sow, and she will never cause any trouble unless she is a particularly vicious or ill-mannered female.

Recent public sales indicate that the pure bred cattle industry is on a very healthy basis.

A dozen sheep are more effective weed destroyers than a man and a hoe.

NAVEL ILL IN FOALS.

Preventive Measures the Only Safe Way With This Disease.

One of the greatest dangers to the young colt is what is known as "navel ill." This is an infectious disease. Navel ill cannot develop unless the specific organism producing it is present. The organism producing navel ill enters the animal's body through the navel. Where mares foal on open pasture the colt is almost never affected with this disease. The germ is not there and without it the disease cannot develop. Germs are apt to be found in barns and stalls where horses and colts have been raised for a good many years.

A colt which is affected with this disease becomes dull and indifferent to nourishment and soon develops fever. Lameness develops in the limbs and oftentimes the owner of the mare assumes that the mare has stepped on the colt. Most frequently the hock is affected. The joints swell up, finally burst and discharge a yellowish, thick fluid. The colt usually continues to

Concrete Tanks and Troughs Never Rot or Leak

HAIR ORNAMENTS.

Fashion Decrees That They Shall Be of Becoming Elegance.

JEWELLED EFFECTS FAVORED.

Coiffure Ornaments to Match the Color Scheme of the Evening Gown—A Fad With Some Fashionables Is the High Psyche Knot.

The simplicity of the fashionable coiffure is discounted this season by the use of many elegant and expensive ornaments. Most women appear at their best in evening attire and make special effort to select a becoming coiffure.

The French are past masters in the art of arranging the hair, and their coiffures are at present of Grecian simplicity. The hair is drawn back over the forehead in soft waves, and the back tresses are coiled in a Grecian knot or a figure 8. Another favorite coiffure resembles that of the Empress Josephine at the time of her coronation. The hair is dressed low over the forehead, and soft ringlets fall about the ears and brow. The back hair is arranged close to the head, and a fillet of jewels is worn well over the forehead.

Another arrangement much approved is obtained in this manner: The hair is softly waved and drawn back over the forehead in a low pompadour. At the back, starting at the nape of the neck, the hair is rolled tightly, following the contour of the head to the crown. On each cheek a question mark is formed with a slender strand of hair. These are moistened with gum arabic to hold their position flat against the cheek. A ring of hair may be fastened to the cheek in the same manner. For the more conservative a single small curl can be formed at each side of the face.

Many smart women are favoring the low pompadour, surmounted by a high Psyche. Frequently these are ornamented with pins or fancy combs.

Any variety of coiffure, if it is high and leaves the ears exposed, is correct.

Hairpins in gray and gold and bronze and brown come in small pack-

Reduction In Their Cost if They Are Prepared at Home.

APPROPRIATE DECORATIONS.

Ornaments Which Hit Off Some Special Fad or Taste of the Bride Are Now Considered Very Smart—A Cake That May Be Kept Indefinitely.

An important feature of the June wedding is the bride cake. Confectioners and bakers unite in charging extreme prices for these dainties, but in families where there is an expert cake baker they may be satisfactorily made at home.

An expert suggests the following economical way to make a delicious bride cake:

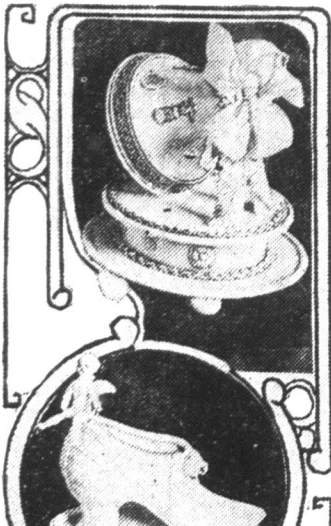

The following ingredients are required: Take one pound each of best butter, light brown sugar, carefully sifted; eggs and flour. The principal ingredients are measured a pound each, but the corresponding measurements by quantity are two cupfuls of butter, two cupfuls of sugar, eight to ten eggs and four level cupfuls of flour, measured after sifting.

Flavorings and fruits to be added to the above measure are as follows: Two teaspoonfuls each of mace and cinnamon, half a teaspoonful of cloves, the grated rinds of a lemon and of one large orange, one level teaspoonful of soda and two to four tablespoonfuls of brandy or spiced fruit sirup.

The required fruits are: One pound each of sultana raisins, dark seeded raisins, dried currants, blanched almonds and candied peels.

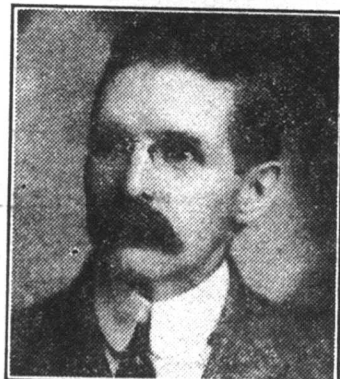

The raisins and currants should be thoroughly washed and dried the day before the cake is mixed. First scald them quickly; then wash in cold water several times, carefully picking out seeds, stones or stalks; then dry them in a warm place, where they will swell a little. The almonds should be cut once lengthwise. The candied peels may consist of a quarter of a pound each of candied orange, citron, lemon and cherries.

Have the fruits weighed and prepared. Have all ingredients at hand

REMARKABLE CURE OF RHEUMATISM

Supt. Of Sunday School In Toronto Cured By "Fruit-a-tives"

R. A. WAUGH, Esq.

TORONTO, ONT., Oct. 1st, 1913.

"For a long time, I have thought of writing you regarding what I term a most remarkable cure effected by your remedy "Fruit-a-tives". I have lived in this city for more than 12 years and am well known. I suffered from Rheumatism especially in my hands. I have spent a lot of money without any good results. I have taken "Fruit-a-tives" for 18 months now and am pleased to tell you that I am cured. All the enlargement has not left my hands and perhaps never will, but the soreness is all gone and I can do any kind of work. I have gained 35 pounds in 18 months."

R. A. WAUGH,
55 DOVERCOURT ROAD.

"Fruit-a-tives" will always cure even the most stubborn cases of Rheumatism because it is the greatest blood purifier in the world and acts on the bowels, kidneys and skin.

"Fruit-a-tives" is sold by all dealers at 50c a box, 6 for $2.50, trial size 25c, or will be sent on receipt of price by Fruit-a-tives Limited, Ottawa.

THE WISE SHOPPER.

She Buys With an Eye to the Ever Changing Fashions.

Don't affect Wattenau hats unless you are young, slender and at least moderately pretty. The Wattenau hat, with its turned up back, its flowers and its chin ribbon, is meant only for the young and pretty woman.

Just because stripes and plaids are fashionable don't use them if they are not becoming. Some faces and many figures suffer when they are surrounded with plaids and stripes. Many plain, soft fabrics or fabrics possessing any of the attributes you are seeking can still be had by the hundred yards together in all the shops.

Styles are changing rapidly. We would do well if we wish to keep in the fashion only to buy such clothes as we really need and to wear those until they are worn out. Then we can with clear consciences buy something new and up to date when styles have settled down into some definite trend or when some still newer, changing styles have shown themselves.

A black hat is more satisfactory for the woman with few hats than one made of plaid or striped taffeta. A black hat can be becomingly worn with

Silage For Calves.

Calves may be fed silage as soon as they are old enough to eat it. It is perhaps of greater importance that the silage be free from mold or decay when given to calves than when given to mature stock. They may be given all the silage they will eat up clean at all times. Yearling calves will consume about one-half as much as mature stock—that is, from fifteen to twenty more pounds a day. When supplemented with some good leguminous feed, if any, grain will be required to keep the calves in a thrifty, grow condition.

Salt For Asparagus.

It on asparagus beds will kill the plants and benefit the asparagus. Kal-sor German potash salt, is better salt, but is somewhat more expensive. After kainit is applied it should be worked into the top soil with a rake. A little later when the asparagus is growing well a dressing of a solution of soda will be very beneficial.

BEES AND ALFALFA.

Investigations of the United States Department of agriculture have shown that a mistaken notion has been held regarding the kinds of bees that aid alfalfa seed. While "leaf cutter" bees "trip" about 90 per cent of the flowers they visit and bumblebees about 50 per cent, honeybees trip about 5 per cent. Even though a flybee trips only 5 per cent of the flowers it visits the great number of bees that can be kept on an alfalfa field, taken in connection with their activity, compensate for the low efficiency of each bee.

The wild bees that are most efficient in ripping do not store up honey of commercial value, nor is there any known of holding them permanently in any locality.

Main investigators have thought that some species of bee from the alfalfa field might prove more valuable than others. If such could be found and introduced the yield of alfalfa seed might be materially increased. There are so many different species of bees in different parts of the country that there is considerable room for experiment.

Maybe He Found It.

That's a pretty good-looking umbrella you have there, Smith." "Aha! You like it, do you? I might somebody would notice that umbrella. I just took it down and put a new cover put on it, and it's good as new." "Had it recovered, eh? How much the job cost you?" "Just $1.50, Jones." "What—$1.50? That sounds preposterous to me. How much has the umbrella cost you now altogether?" "Just $1.50, Jones—just $1.50."

Enough.

Lawyer—Did you examine this carefully before certifying that he was insane? Physician—Yes; I asked her age and she made herself out two years older than she was.

Selfish.

I don't like Mrs. Wombat. Wants to talk about her poodle all the time. Is that so?" "Yes. She never seems to care to talk about my canary."

SMART COIFFURE ORNAMENTS.

ages. The new hairpins have a crinkle or curve or bend that runs lengthwise. This is seen in the short as well as the very long pins.

The separate curls that match the hair and that are worn to conceal the lower but not the upper part of the ear cost $1.50 and $2. These are attached to a strong wire pin of sufficient length to insure their safety.

A very pretty bandeau is of pearls, with small Mercury wings studded solidly with pearls. Glittering sequins strung on a single wire, with an upstanding bow of sequins, are also worn. A pretty ornament, without the bandeau, is made of pearls and rhinestones, and it is attached to a shell pin.

Bandeaux set with colored stones, green, tango, orange or blue, are also to be seen. They have some pretty ornament either in the center or at both ends of the same stones.

A pretty ornament, made of a band of black tulle, is relieved by several small buckles of rhinestones set along its length.

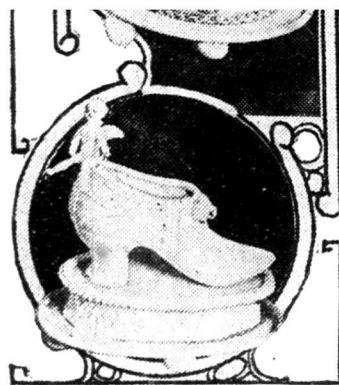

The tendency of the season is to make the coiffure as simple as possible, but to have no such scruples as to the ornaments used. These may be as elegant as one can afford. Fancy jeweled effects in shades to match the costume are favored. Rhinestones and uncolored crystals are much used. Illustrated here are two of the simpler ornaments. The side comb shown here has an outstanding ornament of rhinestones. The comb for the back of the head is bordered and is also set with rhinestones.

A Long Message.

The longest item of news ever telegraphed to a newspaper was the entire New Testament as revised, which was sent from New York to a Chicago newspaper for May 22, 1882. That issue of the paper comprised twenty pages, sixteen of which were taken up by the New Testament.

Diplomacy.

Lady—I'm afraid one foot is bigger than the other. Shopman—On the contrary, madam, one is perhaps smaller than the other.—London Opinion.

ORNAMENTS FOR WEDDING CAKE.

on the mixing table, with measuring spoons also at hand. Sift the flour with the soda and spice and put it on a paper near the fire to warm. Cream the butter in a warm bowl, but do not let it get oily. Add the sugar to the butter gradually. Then break in one egg (do not beat it), add a spoonful of flour and thoroughly beat, using a wooden spoon with a flat bowl.

Gradually add the eggs and the liquids and enough flour to preserve the creamy consistency, beating between each addition. The old rule was to beat five minutes between each egg, but unless the housekeeper has some one to help her with this she is likely to be wearied with so much beating.

When all the eggs and liquids are in add the grated rinds and the fruit and finally fold in the remaining flour. In beating learn to use different sets of muscles, so that the beating process may be kept up uninterruptedly without too much fatigue on the part of the beater.

Since the eggs are beaten into the batter whole, one at a time, with about a tablespoonful of flour to maintain the creamy consistency, the beating must be given to them after they are added to the batter.

This batter will make a cake of about eight or nine pounds. This cake can be packed away in brown sugar after it is cool and left until shortly before it is wanted for serving, when it can be given frosting and final decorations. It will keep well indefinitely.

The decoration of the cake is not such a difficult matter as one might expect. Ornaments suitable for brides' cakes may be purchased of the confectioner. Then only the simple white frosting and possibly a fancy border need be applied at home.

It is a popular idea at this time to choose some object that will suggest the bride's special penchant. For instance, if she is a motorist a sugar automobile filled with orange blossoms may be selected for the cake. Illustrated here are two quite conventional ornaments in specially graceful forms. One represents the wedding bell and the other the conventional slipper, guarded by a smiling Cupid.

In the Depths of the Sea.

The quantity of light emitted by many minute deep sea animals is so great as to supply over definite areas of the sea bottom a sufficient illumination to render visible the colors of the animals themselves. Some cephalopods are furnished with apparatus which reflects the light from their phosphorescent bodies upon the sea bottom over which they float. This reflecting apparatus is spoken of as "an efficient bullseye lantern for use in hunting through the abysmal darkness."

the fashion only to buy clothes as we really need and to wear those until they are worn out. Then we can with clear consciences buy something new and up to date when styles have settled down into some definite trend or when some still newer, changing styles have shown themselves.

A black hat is more satisfactory for the woman with few hats than one made of plaid or striped taffeta. A black hat can be becomingly worn with frocks of every color. And, more than that, a black hat is not remembered by every one who sees it as a bright hat is likely to be remembered. A third point in its favor has the black hat. It is more generally becoming than a colored one.

Don't wear a color just because you have noticed that it is often used in descriptions of the clothes shown in the French openings. Tango, for instance, is a somewhat trying color to many complexions. So are some of the odd blue and green shades. Remember that black and white and dark blue are always capable of being made to look fashionable and that they are becoming to most persons.

THE CLOTHES CLOSET.

Method of Keeping Garments Nice and Economizing Space.

The usual method of preparing a closet for the proper keeping of wearing apparel is to place a row of hooks along the back and ends, with possibly a long rod extending from one end to the other, from which hangers may be suspended.

As we all know, this means that garments that hang in the rear are not very easy to get at. Only those on the rod are in evidence. For the others we grope blindly, grasping a skirt to discover whether it is the blue serge, the gray voile or the white mohair we want. And as for the things suspended on the hooks behind, they might as well be in trunks and boxes as far as distinguishing one from the other goes.

Now some clever woman has found that by fixing a swinging rack—very much on the order of the towel rack, a dozen arms extending friendly ends out for holding garments—the capacity as well as the convenience is trebled. These arms are made of light wood, so they can be doubled, with light clamps on the outer ends that slip in a groove, holding fast anything placed between. In this way half a dozen pairs of trousers or the same number of skirts, hung by folded belts, may be nicely and neatly kept in order on one rack, and if there are two, one at either end of the closet or one with longer arms directly in the center at the back, it will be such a comfort to find double the amount of room with garments all visible without extra light of any sort.

Minuteness of Molecules.

Molecules are so minute that there are about a sextillion of them in a cubic inch of air. These at freezing temperature oscillate back and forth at the rate of 1,470 feet a second. The average length of their path between oscillations is about one two-hundred and seventy-seven thousandth of an inch. Each comes into collision with its fellows about 5,000,000 times a second.

Is it the intention of the Citizens of Napanee to celebrate the semi-centennial of the town in 1915. Time to start the monument is NOW! Let us hear from you.

A little son of Mr. and Mrs. Eph. Martin, aged about four years was visiting in Deseronto and while there was taken suddenly ill on Tuesday and died on Wednesday morning. The cause of death was appendicitis.

Mr. W. A. Abbott and family, Selby, wish to thank their many friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy shown them in any way during the illness and death of their mother, Mrs. George Sweet.

A sudden death occurred at Hayburn, on July 2nd, in the person of Maggie A. Huffman, beloved wife of Major A. B. Lovst. Death was due to heart failure caused by over exertion. Mrs. Lovst was a young woman of about forty years. She was well-known all through Lennox county.

The local firemen are experiencing some difficulty in financing their trip to Lindsay on July 30th, owing to the large amount of funds needed. Mr. Jas. Foster the genial proprietor of Wonderland, and one of the most public spirited men in Napanee, has again decided to help the firemen and has set aside Monday and Tuesday nights of next week for the firemen's benefit. The admission will be 10c.

A Woman's Crowning Glory is Her Hair.

All ladies who find that their own hair is not sufficient to produce youthful and correct styles in hair-dressing remember the visit of Prof. Dorenwend, to the Paisley House on Wednesday, July 22nd. He will display a large stock of the latest styles in human hair goods, such as switches, transformations, braids, waves, pompadours etc., made from selected European hair and uncomparable with any others for workmanship, efficiency and natural and becoming effects when adjusted. To advertise these goods this special stock will be sold at the Paisley House, Napanee, for less than cost on Wednesday, July 22nd. Remember date.

Reception to Pastor.

On Friday evening, July 3rd, a reception was held in the school-room of Grace Church for Rev. and Mrs. C. E. Cragg. Mr. and Mrs. Cragg received at the door, the presentations being made by Mr. C. D. Eyvel. A welcome was then extended to Mr. and Mrs. Cragg by each of the organizations of the church, to which Mr. Cragg made very suitable reply. Rev. Mr. Nickle then made a few remarks, which were followed by a delightful musical programme. Refreshments of ice cream and cake were then served by the ladies. The proceedings of the evening were presided over by Mr. W. T. Gibbard, in his usual affable manner.

The dark ages were so called from the fact that for 1,000 years or so in the period between the fall of the Roman empire and the revival of learning Europe was in intellectual darkness. Scholarship had practically disappeared from the earth. Very few were able to read or write. Nearly all knowledge of the arts and sciences, of history and literature, had perished, and the almost universal ignorance lay upon men like a great cloud. The wisdom of the past was locked up in Latin, which was known only to the scholars, and it was not until about 1453 (at the fall of Constantinople) that the Greeks began to enlighten the darkened mind of Europe.

Met a Tragic Death.

Henry Willard, a son of Heaman Willard, one of the best-known residents of Amherst Island, lost his life under tragic circumstances at Buck Lake, Alta., on June 22nd. The father has just arrived home with the remains. It appears that Willard, with two companions, was thrown into the lake by their boat upsetting, and then, on starting to swim to shore, was suddenly drawn under a little way from the edge of the lake. The story, as given by Avery Coughlin, one of the companions of the unfortunate man, was that he and Willard and a man named Humdruff, all three homesteaders, went on a fishing trip to Buck Lake, which is sixty miles west of Wetaskiwin. While attempting to raise a heavy net the boat capsized, throwing all three into the icy water. Willard was the only one who could swim, and telling the others to cling to the boat, he started to land to get assistance. He was making good headway when suddenly his companions were dismayed to see him throw up his hands and sink. At first they thought he had been seized by cramps but it happened so suddenly they were paralyzed with fear. However, they clung to the boat and in some hours it drifted ashore. Both men were in an exhausted condition. Mr. Humdruff was the weaker of the two and could go no farther, but Mr. Coughlin managed to drag himself to the nearest house for assistance. The late Henry Willard was born on Amherst Island and lived there all his life, until about four years ago, when he located at Calgary. Last April he left Calgary to settle on a homestead.

Obituary.

(Sweet) Hannah Hudgins, died July 3rd, 1914, at the age of 80 years. She was the daughter of Ezekiel Hudgins and was born in the Township of Richmond, Ontario, March 31st, 1834. She was united in marriage December 24th, 1868, to Geo. W. Sweet, of Richmond, where they lived many happy years until he died about sixteen years ago. Since that time she has lived in the old home with her only daughter, Mrs. Asa Abbott. Very early in her life she was led to Christ and has remained a faithful member of the Methodist church. Her christian life was beautifully simple and genuinely true. Every good cause found in her a friend, and though for several years her health would not permit her to attend the public service, still she was ever interested in the spread of the Gospel and was ever ready to speak a personal word and to give the spiritual message that was so often helpful. During her last sickness, though she suffered much she often spoke of Jesus and her desire to be with him. Thus from happy surroundings passed a good devoted Christian to be forever with her Lord. She leaves to mourn one daughter, Mrs. Asa Abbott, of Richmond, and three sisters, Mrs. Bradshaw, of California; Mrs. Lydia Schermehorn and Mrs. Sarah Abbott, both of Napanee; three brothers, Ira and Moses Hudgins, of Richmond, and John N. Hudgins, of Phoenix, N. Y. Three brothers having passed on before, Rev. Wm. Hudgins, Geo. and James, of Selby, and an adopted daughter, Mrs. Fletcher McKim. The funeral took place from her late residence July 5th. Services were held in Selby Methodist Church, Rev. E. B. Cook, pastor, in charge. Interment at Riverside cemetery, Napanee.

THIS TRAGIC LETTER—

How would you answer it?

Between the lines of this short letter you can read grim tragedy. If its appeal were made to you, personally, how would you answer it? Suppose you held the power to receive this poor woman or to turn her away, which would you do?

"Will you kindly give me information concerning admission of a very needy woman near me. Her husband is dead, and she is in consumption. She has two small children, at present in an orphan's home, as the mother is not able to care for them, and their only income is what an aged mother earns. They live in one small room."

It is easy to say, "Why, of course, I would offer relief, if it were in my power!"
But, think! Are you sincere when you say that? Are you in earnest? Do you really want to help poor, suffering Con-sumptives? Then here is your chance to prove your sincerity.

Contributions to the Muskoka Free Hospital for Consumptives will be gratefully acknowledged by W. J. Gage, Chairman Executive Committee, 84 Spadina Avenue, or R. Dunbar, Secretary-Treasurer, 347
King Street West, Toronto.
